WAITING FOR DEATH

Four Condemned Murderers in Sing Sing Prison

A NIGHT OF ANXIOUS WATCH

Preparations for the Awful Event—The Fatal Chair and Cabinet—The Kemmler Fiasco Will Not be Repeated

SING SING, N. Y., July 6.—The night passed away quietly in the neighborhood of the state prison. At intervals hacks drove up and drove away again bearing loads of newspaper men. The prison officials did everything they could to make the time pass pleasantly. A generous supply of coffee which had been made for the guards was put in general circulation. Nothing was seen of the warden or any of the witnesses during the night. The warden soon advised the watchers to go away and get four or five hours' sleep, but they would not take his advice and so he sat up to keep them company. Every one about the prison professed ignorance of the warden's whereabouts. It was generally believed that he was off somewhere getting together his witnesses, and the river front was patrolled until a late hour for the possible landing of a special boat with the executive party on board. As the gray dawn crept up in the east, the watchers gave up the idea of a special boat or a special train, and most of them went away to catch a few hours rest.

THE FATAL CHAIR.

The chair in which the condemned man will suffer the death penalty is a substantial as well as comfortable-looking piece of wood workers mechanism, and with the connections with the dynamo was designed by Captain Halbert, the prison machinist, under whose supervision it was built. It is constructed in a thoroughly workmanlike manner, and differs very materially from the chair used in the electrocution of Kemmler at Auburn prison.

The chair is located in a room just south of that occupied by the cells of the condemned men, which is entered by a door opening from the passage which runs in front of their cells. The rooms are 60 feet long by 28 feet wide and is perfectly dark except for the light afforded by the window curtained windows, through which light enters in abundance. The addition in the death chamber is located is the last one built as has a one story frame structure. As the visitor enters the room of execution he faces the chair which is placed at the opposite end. This article of furniture, which is an object of terror to the four men is very solid. The seat is broad and the back, on which a heavy head rest is constructed, has a slight curve. Above the rest and fastened to the back by a long strap is a figure "4" which is intended to rest the head of the occupant. It is through the wire in this the current passes. Besides this there are a number of straps used to secure the prisoner in position after he has taken his seat in the chair.

HOW IT WILL BE DONE.

The chair faces the east and directly behind it is a low cabinet for the use of the man who turns on the current, who is thus out of sight of everybody. Its sides, however, do not reach the ceiling so the operator can have plenty of ventilation. Directly back of the cabinet which stands against it is a door leading directly to the dynamo room. On the side of the cabinet is a sliding door which on being opened reveals the switch board by which the signals are given to the operator, who stands in the cabinet and turns on the fatal current. The first object which meets the eye is a card of printed directions which are framed and read as follows:

FIVE BELLS, get ready
FOUR BELLS, turn on current
TWO BELLS, turn on more current.
THREE BELLS, less current
ONE BELL, shut off current
SIX BELLS, all through.

Underneath the directions is a little electric bell button which is pressed to give the signal to the operator. Near to the placard is the test switch. The switch turns on the current into a dozen or more incandescent lights at the top of the ampere and volt meter, which are in the side with the resistance box. All these are arranged to test the strength of the current before it is put in operation on the condemned men. There is another switch by which the current can be directly connected with the wires leading to the chair. The man at the switch board, however cannot turn the current through the occupant of the chair, this being entirely the province of the man who stands behind the cabinet and operates the switch board located there, which is connected directly with the occupant of the chair.

Captain Halbert, the designer of the chair is proud of its completeness and especially of the code of signals. The failure of those in the Kemmler case was one of the things that made that electrocution such a horrible affair. The captain in speaking of his device asserts that it is able to kill twenty-five men an hour. He has made an improvement on the arrangement of the electrodes which differs materially from that of the Kemmler case. In the latter the current was passed mostly through the body and heart. The [illegible] of the Sing Sing chair has a new [illegible] for applying the electricity to the wrists [illegible] the wrist and an ankle.

Under the new law there will be no story given out by the prison authorities telling how the murderers spent their last night on earth until the world ever know just what they had for breakfast.

AN ELECTRICAL EXPERT.

Among the strangers upon the ground was [illegible] Warden Brush pointed out [illegible] Edison expert and said "That man [illegible] all about the electrical arrangements." To the United Press correspondent [illegible] his name was Henry Nostrand, and [illegible] an expert electrician. He had [illegible] Warden Brown for permission to [illegible] the execution but had been denied. [illegible] general conversation pointed to the [illegible] man's acknowledged fact that he was a [illegible] man. He said it was not true [illegible] the Westinghouse people were interested [illegible] the study of execution. They had [illegible] interest in the matter. If the ex[illegible] brought it could be the fault [illegible] instrument or of the number of volts. [illegible] altogether the fault of the con[illegible]. He believed that the second or negative electrode should be at the base of the [illegible] and they thought that was the way it [illegible] placed. The death of the man [illegible] entirely different, as the electricity [illegible] different ways upon bodies in different states of health. From what he had [illegible] believed that the Japanese would be [illegible]

[illegible] question of the location of the second [illegible] is one of the things puzzling the [illegible] of the prison walls. Warden [illegible] yesterday he did not know [illegible] would be applied to the hands, [illegible] the spine of the condemned men, [illegible] case the negative electrode [illegible] the base of the skull.

With the prison guard was changed at 6 [illegible] this evening the prison wore a very [illegible] like appearance. The armed guard [illegible] the front of the prison grounds and [illegible] all travellers in the roadway, while [illegible]. In the prison office and the [illegible] private parlor could be seen the witnesses who had arrived during the day and [illegible] their quarters with the warden. The warden's family had gone to Newburgh [illegible] the house at the disposal of the witnesses and they made themselves very much at home there.

Several other witnesses arrived after 6 o'clock. On the 6.30 train from Albany came Dr Samuel B. Ward of Albany, a personal friend of Governor Hill, and Dr Franklin Townsend also of Albany. Dr Ward said he supposed he was going to witness the executions although he was not at all positive about it. He had been asked to come down here and had obeyed the request. Further than that he knew nothing and could tell nothing. Dr [illegible] was in the same position. On the train was a physician from Rochester who said [illegible] "I am instructed to say nothing and you'll have to get my name from the warden."

He admitted that he had been invited to attend the execution.

Father Creeden when going to the [illegible] will not be back to-night. One of the witnesses stated distinctly that the execution would not take place before [illegible] in the morning. There are yet three or four witnesses to arrive but they are expected by the late trains.

THEY WILL NOT TALK.

Every one of the witnesses here except Dr McDonald and Warden Durston has been seen and decline to talk claiming they know nothing of the arrangement. Dr McDonald will not come out of the prison at all. Head Keeper Connaughton visited the four prisoners this evening and found them in good health and apparently good spirits. They had had a good dinner. Wood had eaten a beefsteak with potatoes. Slocum toast and milk. Jugigo fish, and Smiler oatmeal and eggs. All of them seemed to relish the meal. They gave orders for breakfast to-morrow morning. No word was conveyed to them that the breakfast might be the last they would eat.

It has been decided that Father Creeden and his assistant Father Hogan will accompany Wood and Slocum to the execution chair. Father Latch, who has been with the prisoners a great deal, was invited to go with them, but he has a horror of witnessing the executions and asked to be excused. Father Hogan is rather pleased with the prospect of viewing the execution. It is not ascertained whether the Jap will have any spiritual consolation offered him. Father Creeden says that under the rules of the church he is not permitted to accompany Juggigo unless he is requested to do so. Jugigo has not asked for any spiritual counsellor, and it is doubtful if he will.

Head-keeper Connaughton said this evening that the arrangements of the cells of the condemned men remained unchanged. Wood is in the cell directly east of the passage leading into the execution room. Next to him is a vacant cell, and next to that the cell of Slocum. Jugiro occupies the cell on the east side of the passage, and next to him is Smiler. The other two murderers are in extreme cells, one on each side. These extreme cells will be screened from the condemned, and no sound of the preliminaries to the execution will be heard in them.

At 8.30 o'clock a convict drove a horse and buggy up to the prison entrance and in a few minutes Warden Brown came out and drove rapidly towards town. He was closely followed by a United Press reporter in another carriage. The warden knew he was followed and took a roundabout way but his single horse could not get away from the rapidly pursuing team. Finally he drove to the depot. Once there he sent a dispatch to Albany asking where Hogan was with the death warrants and then he sat in his [illegible] awaiting the answer. While waiting, the train, leaving Albany at 4.30 and arriving here at 8.44 came in and Deputy-attorney-general Hogan alighted. In answer to queries of the United Press reporter he said "I am down there just for a railroad ride." Asked if he had the death warrants he said, "I have some papers here. You can draw your own inference."

Warden Brown then caught sight of him and took him away from the reporters. He was driven to the prison and was soon enjoying the breeze on the balcony with the other witnesses.

At 10 o'clock all of the invited witnesses had arrived, the last arrivals being a man from Albany, and the two spiritual advisers from the men, Fathers Creeden and Hogan. The latter were dressed in their priestly garb. They visited the cells of the condemned, but as all the men were sleeping, it was thought best not to awaken them.

The priests then retired to their room for night, being warned by the warden to await an early call. Many of the witnesses also retired, the reporters sitting on the grass plats opposite the prison seeing them quite plainly. Some of the witnesses sat in the warden's room until quite late talking, while others walked the terrace. Deputy Warden Connaughton came out about half past ten o'clock and said the condemned men were sleeping soundly and had eaten their light supper with relish. He would not say as to whether the men talked about their fate to-night or not. They retired early. Jugigo has hardly said ten words all day, and is sullen and morose.

When the train leaving New York at 10.40 and arriving here at 11.49 rolled it was expected that Counsel Haire would alight, but neither he or a representative were on board. It was asserted that he would have with him, not a stay of proceedings for Wood but an appeal relating that he sought in vain for a judge and desired further time to get one. Mr. Haire may arrive at some later hour or early in the morning. Even if Mr. Haire brings such an appeal it will be of no effect because the attorney general has already decided that it is of no effect and need not delay the execution.

At midnight all was quiet about the prison, and the only signs of life were the reporters keeping vigil on the hill opposite the prison and the guard pacing in front. The curtains were pulled down in the office, but Warden Brown was still up and about.

At 12.05 the warden had a long talk with the United Press correspondent in front of the prison. "The men are all awake" he said "I [illegible] them. They were very quiet but they evidently know something is coming."

Mr Brown denied that Mr. Lynch had brought any papers of an official character with him. "He brought himself and nothing else," said he "the death warrants came here at the time the men were last resentenced. Let me see that was June 2, I think. I have had them in my safe ever since."

Mr. Brown said that no papers had been served on him in the Wood case. He said he had the opinion of the attorney-general on the appeal put forward by Wood's lawyer as a claim for stay of execution. He would not say what it was, but said: "If no other papers are served on me before the hour of execution you can say that four men have been executed." The warden said that most of the witnesses were asleep. "They are tired," he said. "They would like to know when this thing is going to take place, but they do not know any more about it than you do. There is no one knows when it is [illegible]."

The warden said that he did not know whether he would get any sleep or not. He has not had any sleep since Saturday night.

The guard over the condemned men remains unchanged. Partridge and Butler, who have kept the night watch for many months, are on duty in the condemned cells to-night. They know nothing of the time set for the execution, but they have an idea, as has every one in the prison or without, that the event is set for to-morrow morning.

Father Creeden and Father Lynch were to the prison at midnight, as was Mr. Edgerton, the prison chaplain. They will join the condemned at an early hour some time before the hour set for the execution. [illegible] will probably be the first to know when the hour is. It is not improbable that 10 [illegible] will be the hour [illegible]

[illegible] return.

[illegible] Haire returned at 2 bringing with him a copy of Wallace's reports setting the decision on which he [illegible] the petition [illegible] in Wood's case. He is now with the warden.

BASE BALL

Western Association.

DULUTH-SIOUX CITY.

DULUTH, Minn., July 6.—The Corn Huskers [illegible] the Cliff Dwellers to-day in a game which was not noticeable for any particular features except heavy batting and Meakin's liberality in giving eight men bases on balls. The visitors lost ten men out on flies [illegible]. Pretty double plays were made by both teams. Score: Sioux City 8, Duluth 6.

MILWAUKEE-MINNEAPOLIS.

MILWAUKEE, July 6.—Milwaukee-Minneapolis game postponed on account of rain.

OMAHA-KANSAS CITY.

OMAHA, July 6.—Omaha should have made at least twenty-five runs off Sowders and Darnbrough to-day. The former was very wild and was succeeded by the latter in the seventh but the change was for the worse if anything. Omaha, 11; Kansas City, 9.

National League.

NEW YORK-CINCINNATI.

CINCINNATI, O., July 6.—The Giants could do nothing with Radbourne to-day. All their hits were pop-up flies that were captured by the Reds. Rusie was also very effective for the visitors, but five of the six hits made off him were two-baggers. In the seventh inning Reilly knocked a fly over Bassett's head and reached second. He got to third while Whistler was after Smith's grounder. Clark got his base on balls, and "Rad" made a drive into center for two bases, Reilly and Clark scoring. In the Giants' half of the seventh Gore's triple into right and Connors' sacrifice gave the New York club their only run. Attendance 1670. Score: New York 1; Cincinnati 2.

CLEVELAND-PHILADELPHIA.

CLEVELAND, O., July 6.—Cavian pitched a good game for the Phillies to-day, but the home team hit him just at the right time to make them count, and won the game by a narrow margin. Tebeau carried off the honors at the bat for Cleveland, while Childs' work at second took the fielding honors. Attendance 1200. Score: Cleveland 5, Philadelphia 4.

PITTSBURG-BOSTON.

PITTSBURG, July 6.—The Bostons won to-day's game by hitting just at the right time for hits to count. The fielding on both sides was brilliant. The Bean Eaters bunched their hits for three runs in the first inning and obtained a lead that the home team could not overcome. Attendance 1600. Score: Boston 5, Pittsburg 2.

CHICAGO-BROOKLYN.

CHICAGO, July 6.—The Brooklyns won the game from Chicago to-day in the first inning. Singles by Collins, Ward, O'Brien and Pinckney and an error by Dahlen and a base on balls the visitors three runs in the first inning. They were unable to get but one run after that. In the fifth a single by Collins, steal of second, sacrifices by Ward and Griffin gave them another run. The Chicagos were unable to hit Caruthers at all and were shut out. Score: Brooklyn 4, Chicago 0.

The Deeds of a Monster.

NEW YORK, July 6.—The steamship Alvenia, from Jeremie, Hayti, arrived this morning. She left Hayti on June 25. The reports that 200 persons were put to death just before the vessel sailed, by order of Hippolyte, at Port au Prince. Hippolyte, it was stated, was not dead as rumored.

When the Alvenia left Jeremie on June 20th there were then indications that the black republic would soon be the "scene of another bloody rebellion." Jeremie is in the Southern part of Hayti, where Hyppolyte possessed his strongest support in wresting the presidency from Legitime. At the present, however, that section of the island is bitterly opposed to Hyppolyte, and there are loud mutterings against his rule. So strong is the opposition to the president that an outbreak is apt to occur at any moment.

Many of the residents are so fearful of the impending insurrection that they are leaving in all haste.

The Alvenia carried a number of residents of Jeremie to Kingston, Jamaica and other fugitives are leaving on every departing vessel. Second-officer Sargent of the Alvenia said that an old resident of Jeremie who formerly occupied an important position under the government told him that the present government will not last long. The people are so constituted that it is almost impossible for any form of government to last long.

An old Haytian politician named May brant is secretly fomenting a rebellion and is looked upon as Hippolyte's successor in case the president is overthrown. There have been no executions by Hippolyte's soldiers since the execution of the six men reported some time ago.

Presidential Movements.

CAPE MAY, July 6.—Attorney-General Miller arrived to-day as the guest of the president. Postmaster General Wanamaker also arrived to-day.

Mrs. Harrison, Russell Harrison, Lieutenant and Mrs. Parker and Mrs. Dimmick were out in the inlet sailing and fishing during the day. Charles Emery Smith was at the cottage and had an informal chat with the president to-day.

Too Much Electricity.

DENVER, July 6.—John Porter, a colored man went to the roof of the McClurg building at 11.40 this morning to clean a skylight. He did not return, and at 12 o'clock he was noticed by some one in an adjoining building, lying on his back, grasping the electric light wires. His hands were horribly burned and when removed his body fell as limp as a corpse. Physicians can not tell yet whether he will recover or not.

Silver Purchases.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 6.—The amount of silver offered for sale to-day was 1,470,000 ounces, and the amount purchased 633,000 ounces, at from $1.0140 to $1.0188.

THE WIND BLEW.

The Louisiana Penitentiary is Blown to Pieces

TEN CONVICTS WERE KILLED

Falling Walls Crush Convicts Workers and Hospital Patients—The Governor's Mansion Destroyed—Steamer Wrecked—Other Damage.

NEW ORLEANS, July 6.—[illegible] killed [illegible] three [illegible]

BATON ROUGE, [illegible] the [illegible] roofs [illegible] bricks. [illegible] damage. The penitentiary was [illegible] down [illegible] persons killed [illegible] thirty [illegible]. The loss is very great. The factory building was demolished and the hospital of the penitentiary is a mass of debris.

DETAILS OF THE WRECK.

NEW ORLEANS, La., July 6.—The [illegible] Baton Rouge special says: A terrific cyclone struck this city a little after [illegible] o'clock this morning passing from southwest to northeast. It entered the city at the [illegible] barracks, passed up the [illegible] town and struck the [illegible] of Mr John Johnson's residence.

Its path continued in a northeasterly direction crossing North Boulevard a hundred yards to the east of the governor's mansion, it then went north striking the penitentiary building and T. J. Dougherty's residence on North street and thence beyond the city.

The cyclone was three hundred yards wide and ricocheted along its course like a cannon ball devastating as it went. In the city no one was killed though several persons were seriously injured.

"I have just returned from the state penitentiary, which is partially wrecked. Ten convicts were killed and thirty-five injured; five of these were dangerously."

The following is a list of the dead: Whites, Ira McClelland of Calcasieu; J. A. Waggoner of Claiborne, Fred Case of Ouachita, James Van Meter of Natchitoches, John Gibson and William Willow of Orleans. Gibson was one of the Mealy murderers. Colored: Nathan Chance of East Feliciana, Henry Calshirn of Orleans, Beauregard Harden of Bossier, Edward Buckner of Caddo.

The convicts were at work in the jeans pants factory, in the third story of the north wing, when the storm struck the building and entirely demolished the second and third stories. There were others in the hospital in the second story and it is a miracle that any escaped with their lives. Mr. John Rodius, one of the [illegible], was sitting in the third story window opening to the south when he was blown into the yard along with bricks and other debris. He escaped uninjured. Ex-Judge J. P. Ford was in the commissary on the first floor when the building collapsed. He got near a wall and stood still muttering a prayer as he felt that his hour had come. When the materials quit falling he saw an opening and escaped into the yard uninjured. He immediately went to work to save and relieve others.

In addition to the north wing, the cell building was unroofed and partially destroyed. The women's ward was also unroofed. It is impossible to form any estimate of the damage to the buildings, as all the property is more or less injured.

In the city fifty houses at least were unroofed or destroyed. Mr J H Young and members of his family were seriously hurt by the collapse of their house on St. Charles street. Mrs. Cotton, son and two daughters living in a brick house on Main street, opposite the Mr. G. D. Waddill's, were injured in the falling of the building. Mrs. Cotton received a dangerous blow on the back of the head and also internal injuries, while one of the girls was cut on the leg. Mrs. Cotton it is thought, will recover. There were no others seriously hurt.

There were forty persons at work in the pants factory at the time of the crash and of that number six were killed, and twenty-two were wounded and horribly crushed. On the second or central floor was the hospital where twenty-six prisoners lay undergoing medical treatment, of which number four were killed and fourteen seriously, if not fatally injured. The fire alarm was sounded and the fire department was summoned to the scene of the dreadful catastrophe and citizens and city officials, aided by the uninjured prisoners, worked vigorously for the rescue of the unfortunate souls who lay some dead and others dying, confined under the great heap of debris that was strewn over every part of the premises.

Scenes of great and unimaginable horror greeted the eyes of those engaged in the rescuing work, and the pitiful wails and death groans from the men buried out of sight beneath the massive heap of brick and mortar, could be heard arising from every part of the wreck imploring help, and altogether the scene was heartrending.

The storm was attended by a most violent rain in which the rescuers were working and which lasted for several hours until both the living and dead were excavated from the ruins.

The wounded number thirty-six. Of these about six are expected to die before night and the recovery of several of the others is extremely doubtful. The total damage to the penitentiary building is estimated at $30,000.

A visit to the capitol and other state buildings showed them unharmed by the winds, as was also the business portion of the town on Main and Ford streets. The extent of the damage done through out the city by the storm cannot be accurately estimated at this time, but it can be said that the greatest loss that Baton Rouge ever sustained either from cyclone or from fire. The cyclone did not make a track right through the city but seemed to strike the ground and bound forward like a ball. It passed over several houses at a time, and descending again tore its way for hundreds of feet at a time while trunks of large trees were popped off like pipe stems. So sudden was the storm that a number of bread carts, express wagons and other vehicles were caught and wrecked in the streets, and it departed as suddenly as it came. There were a number of narrow escapes but no serious injuries are reported besides those mentioned.

FURTHER DETAILS.

NEW ORLEANS, July 6.—At 6.30 this morning a terrific wind and rain storm struck Baton Rouge, La., and in a few minutes had almost flattened the town. Great damage was done to buildings in the eastern and southern portions of the city and many persons killed. The governor's mansion was demolished, also the [illegible] brick factory, with a wing of the three-story brick building in the penitentiary known as the hospital and commissary, with a pantaloon factory on the upper floor, were blown down and totally destroyed. Forty persons were at work in the factory and of these six were killed and twenty-two wounded and horribly crushed. On the second floor was the hospital, where twenty-six persons were under medical treatment. Four of these were killed and fourteen seriously or fatally wounded. The alarm bells were rung and the fire department responded and with citizens went to work rescuing. The scene was of great horror. A violent rain was falling [illegible] the men worked hard and soon had [illegible] and injured out of the debris.

[illegible] it went. A number [illegible] houses were blown to pieces and the beautiful [illegible] trees of many of the streets were uprooted. A visit to the capitol and other [illegible] buildings shows them unharmed by the wind, as was also the [illegible] portion of the town on Main and Ferry streets unaffected by the storm. The south[illegible] portion of the city styled [illegible] suffered great loss and damage of property. In this section of the city several persons were seriously hurt and bruised by flying timbers from falling houses and [illegible]. The extent of damage done through out the city by the storm cannot accurately be estimated at this time, but it can be said that this is the greatest loss Baton Rouge has ever sustained, either from cyclone or fire. Total damage done will reach several hundred thousand dollars.

A number of very narrow escapes are reported. Charley Day was in his father's drug store when it collapsed, and although the room was turned upside down and the [illegible] twisted in every direction, he escaped with a slight bruise on the forehead. Paul Baum and family were covered by the ruins of their house, but were rescued by friends. Mr Baum had his feet badly crushed [illegible] Mrs. Wolf, wife of a conductor, was badly bruised about the body.

Missouri River Breaks.

ATCHISON, Kan., July 6.—The Missouri river broke through Doniphan point at the neck yesterday afternoon, transferring the main channel about a mile east of where it broke through last week. Jacob Koch's house was left standing on an island of fifty acres. He has transferred all his possessions to the main land. The house of a man named King fell into the current yesterday and was swept away. The river is cutting the banks on both sides of the new channel and the main body of water flows through it. The government steamer Allert, which passed here at 5 o'clock this morning, is stranded near Doniphan. The water rose six inches here last night.

New York Stock Market.

NEW YORK, July 6.—A slight improvement in the early London markets had the effect of strengthening prices here at the opening, but this influence was speedily offset in Burlington and Quincy and L. & N. In the first named, it was quite evident that [illegible] combination was at work on the stock, possibly in connection with the expected selling orders. The attack was foreshadowed on Friday, and was prepared for by the publication of a bearish article in one of the Sunday newspapers. Louisville and Nashville was pressed on the market in connection with to-day's meeting of stockholders in Louisville while it was currently believed that the directors would carry through successfully their plans for authorizing a further issue of stock, the theory naturally following that an increase in capitalization must impress the existing shareholders unfavorably.

Cables from London report that the £1,000,000 went out of the Bank of England for Russia. According to the most reliable sources of information, £500,000 more will go to Russia this month and £1,500,000 will go next month. No other withdrawals of gold from London are looked upon as certain, but it would not occasion surprise if Germany, Holland and South America should draw on the Bank of England's great surplus stock. The general market, aside from Burlington and Louisville, was firm, and in most cases fractional advances were recorded by midday. Even the stocks named partly recovered. In the evening a decidedly firmer tone was developed all around. The Granger stocks, Northern Pacific and North American were especially strong, and led the upward movement. It was said that Villard was actively supporting his own specialties, but there was no apparent reason for crediting these stories. The Granger stocks were sought after by Chicago parties to a considerable extent on the favorable crop reports. Towards the close the upward movement was checked by the announcement of the engagement of another $400,000 gold, but there was only a slight reaction. Union Pacific developed some weakness in the late dealings on the report of decreased earnings. Atchison was strong on its favorable statement for May which showed an increase in earnings of $143,000. The house engaging the half million gold to-day for shipment by to-morrow's steamer was that of Lazard Freres. Mr Henry Villard was at his office to-day for the first time since his return from Europe. The advance in the stocks with which he is identified was attributed to his presence.

The afternoon's trading was on a very limited scale and without feature of interest. The closing prices were ⅛ to ½ per cent. higher than those of Friday, in most cases. Total sales 117,140 shares.

Disastrous Target Practice.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., July 6.—The British warship Cordelia, Captain Harry T. Grenfel, ten guns, 2280 tons, and 243 horse power has just returned to this port after a most disastrous trip to station for target practice with her big guns. Capt. Grenfel reports while practising with one of the Cordelia's 6-inch breech loading guns, the latter exploded killing Lieut. William R. Hillgar, Lieut. Gordon and four seamen and wounding three midshipmen and ten seamen. The Cordelia is a single screw corvette built of steel and iron and cased with wood. She is attached to the Australian station.

A Steamer Sunk.

LONDON, June 6.—The startling intelligence has just been received that a large steamer sunk off Dover some time during last night. Dispatches say that most of the vessel is visible above the water. No details of the disaster are as yet obtainable.

A Long Imprisonment.

[illegible], Colo., July 6.—E. O. Fyffe was sentenced to-day to thirty years imprisonment for the killing of A. C. Scribner, on April 26, 1891.

A ROYAL WEDDING.

Marriage of the Princess Louise at Windsor Castle

ROYAL MAGNIFICENCE NO CARD

The Queen, Emperor, Princes and Nobility by the Dozen Are in Attendance—Gorgeous Dresses and Decorations—Flowers and Silver

LONDON, July 6.—The wedding of the Princess [illegible] most [illegible] witnessed in [illegible] had the [illegible] since early [illegible] with [illegible] presenting a scene of splendor unequalled since the marriage of the late Prince Leopold in 1882. [illegible] were mounted at the [illegible] chapel and the route [illegible] Castle Hill was lined with guards [illegible] the representatives of the [illegible] house of Anhalt Dessau.

The [illegible] containing the Kaiser, the Kaiserin, the Prince and Princess of Wales with the Princesses Victoria and Maud, the Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh and Connaught, Prince Henry and the Princess Beatrice of Battenburg, Louise, Duchess of Fife without the baby.

The third body was the Prince Aribert, the bridegroom and his attendants. Then came her majesty Queen Victoria who was received by the wildest applause, acclamation following acclamation. The bride accompanied by her father Prince Christian and the young Prince Christian her brother followed the queen. All the carriages had outriders in scarlet liveries. Blasts upon trumpets heralded the royal arrival at the chapel. The guests were received by the royal [illegible], who ushered all of them to their places. The dais in front of the altar was covered with a magnificent blue carpet, on which [illegible] the seats of velvet and gold for [illegible] of the royal and imperial family. The seats of other guests were overhung with banners of the Order of the Garter but there were no decorations except a marvellous assemblage of flowers from the royal conservatory.

The Prince of Wales escorted the German empress into the chapel. The empress wore a sea-green moire antique. They were preceded by the emperor escorting the Princess of Wales whose bodice sparkled with German orders and wore splendid parure of diamonds. Queen Victoria was attired in simple black, with a coronet of diamonds. The bridegroom came next with his brothers, Prince Frederic and Prince Edward. They were led to the altar by the royal chamberlain and were soon followed by the bride, her father and her brother. The bridal dress was of white, bordered by orange blossoms, the skirt draped with Honiton lace and the girdle with white flowers. The bridesmaids wore white silver, ostrich plumes in their hair, their skirts were of white satin, with silver girdles and they carried bouquets of Marshal Neil roses.

The Archbishop of Canterbury officiated. The answers of the bridegroom to the questions in the marriage ritual were clear, but those of the bride were indistinct.

The Imperial Visit.

LONDON July 6.—The emperor of Germany arose at an early hour this morning and after a light breakfast, he left Windsor Castle on horseback accompanied by the Duke of Connaught and a [illegible] staff and visited Eton college.

A PATRIOTIC APPEAL.

LONDON July 6.—The Right Hon. Edward Stanhope, secretary of state for war, has written a letter to the newspapers in which he appeals to patriotism of employers to give volunteers in their employ a whole holiday in order to enable the men to make a brave show at Wimbledon on the review of the troops by Emperor William.

Germans are Gratified.

BERLIN July 6.—The newspapers of this city express much gratification at the reception extended to Emperor William in England, and emphasize the political importance of the character of his welcome.

The Post says that the display made in honor of the emperor's visit may be considered not only as an act of homage to Germany's [illegible] but as a manifestation of England's desire to preserve her friendship with Germany.

A Mexican Revolution.

CHICAGO, July 6.—A dispatch from San Francisco says a packet of letters from a prominent official in the city of Mexico to a friend in this city became public property by accident. The letters bring the startling intelligence that Mexico is on the verge of another revolution, and that already large quantities of arms and ammunition are secreted in the large cities of the country. The revolution has been [illegible] in its preparations by the death of Gen Manuel Dueblen, secretary of the Mexican treasury, and a firm friend and supporter of President Diaz. General Dueblan was one of the men who have been able to hold the Diaz administration together, and now that he is dead, the revolutionists are ready to strike and are simply waiting for the signal to be given.

—The revolutionists, who include the great mass of natives, are led by some of the the ablest politicians of Mexico. They will wait until Diaz is compelled by his financial trouble with the Berlin house of [illegible] and will then make a bold, concerted effort to seize the government.

AN EMPHATIC DENIAL.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Senor Romero, the Mexican minister here, denies emphatically the truth of the report published this morning in a San Francisco dispatch to the effect that Mexico is ripe for a revolt against the Diaz government. "President Diaz," he said, "had succeeded in keeping Mexico in peace for fourteen years, more than any other government could do and under the sha[illegible] of the peace, the credit of Mexico has been restored, about 8000 miles of railroad have been built the country has been rapidly developed, foreign trade has increased considerably, the public resources have been trebled, the seeds of revolt have been destroyed and the government is strong enough to suppress in the bud any insurrection which might take place."

A Doctors' Disagreement.

DENVER, July 6.—The state board of medical examiners is still in a turmoil regarding the recent appointments upon the board by the governor of three physicians who are alleged to advertise themselves to a degree that is entirely "unprofessional." These doctors are Dr Mayfield of Ouray, Dr. Perry of Aspen and Dr. Hart of Denver. The admission of these gentlemen has resulted in considerable ill-feeling on the part of many of the older members and several threatened to resign. How the affair will terminate remains to be seen. The board meets at Dr T. A. Hughes' office to-morrow morning and some interesting results are looked for.

The Bank Is All Right.

LAS VEGAS, N. M., July 6.—The statement in the Kansas City Journal that Hon. H. B. Smith a special bank examiner, had come to Las Vegas to take charge of the First National bank here is totally unfounded. The condition of the mentioned institution, in every particular, was never more satisfactory than at present. This is authentic.

Weather Indications.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—For Colorado, Light showers, stationary temperature except slightly [illegible] at Pueblo, variable winds.

One by one foreign nations are enlisted for the World's Fair at Chicago. Russia is the latest to signify its intention to take part. The big four will be a success.

Emperor William is receiving a great welcome in England, but it cannot compare with that which was accorded to President Harrison. One is the welcome of a monarch, the other of a people.

If recent stories are true President Balmaceda and President Hippolyte are a pair of precious rascals who make a good match for some of the kings which royalty has inflicted upon the world.

The Chicago Herald has done a service to history in having determined beyond reasonable doubt, that the San Salvador upon which Columbus made his first landing after discovering this country, is now known as Watling island. The island has been thoroughly identified by passages from Columbus' own note book and the question which has so long been a puzzle to geographers and historians seems definitely settled at last.

There is a great deal more lynch law in the United States than there ought to be, and it is largely due to needless and unjust delays in the execution of law that give lynch law an excuse for its existence. It is to be hoped that the execution of the four New York murderers will put an end to the quibbling and appeals which have delayed but not prevented the carrying out of the sentences against them.

Pedestrians along some of the sidewalks of the residence streets find just cause for complaint on account of the apparent thoughtlessness of some property owners in placing their lawn sprinklers too near the sidewalk, thus compelling those passing that way to take the middle of the street or subject themselves to an uncalled-for shower bath. A little better judgment exercised by some of the operators of lawn sprinklers would surely meet the approbation of all pedestrians.

The return of the Chilian steamer Itata to the harbor of San Diego in custody of the Charleston is a vindication of the dignity of this government quite as complete as though she had been captured in open battle. So far as the value of the ship or cargo is concerned, it does not amount to much, nor indeed was the supposed violation of the neutrality laws a matter of first importance. But the affront offered to the United States by those in charge of the vessel was direct and open and it is a matter of satisfaction that the affair has been arranged in the only possible way. It is true that there was no fighting but it is equally true that the navy was ready to fight if necessary and that it has given a strong illustration of its usefulness.

The legislature at its last session passed an act for the maintenance of permanent registration lists in cities of the first and second class. No one will be allowed to vote at any future election in such cities who has not been registered in accordance with this act. The board of county commissioners, in accordance with the new law, have been preparing such a list, and have employed canvassers as they are authorized to do. The object of the new law is to increase the ease and certainty of identification at the polls, and so to prevent fraud. There can be no doubt that it will do this to a considerable extent. It is of course advantageous to all that these lists should be as full and accurate as possible. Anyone who has not been listed by the canvasser should make application to the county clerk.

LITERARY NOTES.

Harper & Brothers' announcement of new publications includes Hubert Howe Bancroft's "Literary Industries;" Rolfe's "Tales from Scottish History;" a life of "The Right Honorable W. E. Gladstone," by G. W. E. Russell; a volume of short stories entitled "Idaho, and Other Stories," by George A. Hibbard; "A Man's Conscience," a novel by Avery MacAlpine; "Farming," by R. K. Munkittrick, illustrated by A. B. Frost; the third number of "Harper's School Speaker;" and the library edition of Walter Besant's new story, "St. Katherine's by the Tower."

The criticism has been made of American reviews that they contain too few reviews of great subjects and too many mere brief statements of problems and projects. This criticism is hardly warranted in the case of The Forum for July. Besides the explanation by Geffcken (it was Geffcken, by the way, who was imprisoned for the publication of the late Emperor Frederick's diary) of the downfall of Bismark and of the character and policy of the young emperor of Germany, there are the following "reviews," properly so-called, in the July Forum. Mr. Aldace F. Walker, formerly a member of the Interstate Commerce commission and now Commissioner of the Western Traffic association, reviews the operations of the Interstate Commerce law. He shows that it has worked, contrary to the expectation of its framers, for the benefit of the strong roads and to the detriment of the weak ones. Gen. Francis A. Walker reviews, by the returns of the census of 1890 the growth of the colored population, and finds that its increase has been relatively less than the increase of the white population. The negro is falling behind in numbers and is drifting more and more to the lowlands of the south. Prof. Herbert B. Adams of the John Hopkins university, recites in detail what has been done for university extension in the United States, and points out the important part that this movement for popular education is likely to play. Besides these articles there are discussions of immigration by Oswald Ottendorfer, proprietor of the New York Staats-Zeitung, himself, of course, an immigrant; of silver and the coinage laws of the United States by ex-Secretary Fairchild, and the need of more money by David M. Stone, editor of the New York Journal of Commerce; of the new copyright law, from an English point of view, by Fr. R. Daldy, secretary of the English Copyright league; of a method to prevent national bank embezzlements, apropos of the bank wrecking in Philadelphia, by J. Selwin Tait; an argument to show the need that the United States has of Cuba for military as well as trade purposes, by Gen. Thomas Jordan; and an essay on "Home Life in France," by Philip Gilbert Hamerton.

The new Fashion Journals, "La Mode," "La Mode de Paris," and "Album des Modes," published by A. McDowell & Co., 4 West 14th Street, New York, are the most elegant of their kind ever brought to our notice. The styles are drawn by the best artists; and the books are produced by rival houses in Paris, each trying to excel the other in the character of its publications. Formerly they were printed only in French; but they are now published in English for the use of American readers. These journals furnish the styles one month in advance of any similar publications; and they have a practical department, in which lessons are given each month on how to make dresses, etc. The admirable fashions, the lessons in dressmaking, and the giving of the styles one month earlier than heretofore are strong points in favor of these Fashion Books, causing them to be called "The Favorites."

The first book to be published by Harper & Brothers under the new copyright law is the life of The Right Honorable William E. Gladstone, by G. W. E. Russell. This is the fourth volume in the new series of political biographies entitled "The Queen's Prime Ministers," edited by Stuart J. Reid, of which the other three are devoted to Lord Beaconsfield, Sir Robert Peel, and Viscount Melbourne. Being written from personal acquaintance with the career of Mr. Gladstone, the present volume may confidently be regarded as the most accurate and impartial biography of the great statesman that has yet been published.

The most complete history of the Chilian war yet published in this country will appear in Harper's Weekly published July 8th. The illustrations will include views of prominent localities connected with the war, pictures of Chilian war-ships, and portraits of the leading men on both sides of the conflict.

A Plague of Grasshoppers.

GRAND FORKS, N. D., July 6.—Commissioner Barry of this county has returned from the grasshopper district which he states is increasing in area. The hoppers are beginning to hatch on low lying lands, and are coming out rapidly. Many farmers in the vicinity of Orr are catching from five to ten bushels per day.

Wool Markets.

Coates Bros. wool commission merchants of Philadelphia, have the following comments on the state of the market in their circular for July 1, 1891: "All markets continue quiet. Most of the arrivals last month consisted of the early unwashed and territory wools, and the better class of these have so far met with fair sale at quotations. Washed wools are now coming forward more freely, but not enough has yet been received and graded to make sufficient offerings to interest manufacturers. It will, however, be soon shown whether there is to be sufficient demand to keep wool moving at current prices, or whether buyers will hold off and make dull and dragging markets. But few Eastern houses are buying in the West and most of the supplies now coming forward are from local operators who have, in most sections, bought at conservative prices, and are prepared to have sales made at present quotations. The coming month is usually an active one, and should any fair demand set in, the supplies now coming forward would soon be found inadequate. Prices seem low enough to induce more active buying, and when manufacturers find they can get desirable kinds, they may be more active purchasers. Worsted yarns are lower, particularly those made from quarter-blood fleece and fine delaine wools. Following are the quotations for Colorado and New Mexico:

A TRUE TALE OF HORROR

THE AWFUL MEDIÆVAL TRAGEDY OF BEATRICE CENCI.

A Fiendish Father Slain by His Children—The Palace They Occupied Said to Be Haunted—Touching Scene at the Scaffold—An Exciting Story Retold.

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, July 1.—Rome used to be one of the most interesting cities in Europe. It is very interesting still, but having, since 1870, been the capital of Italy, it has lost much of its peculiarity. When it was the great center of Roman Catholicism, the pontific capital of the world, it had an ecclesiastic atmosphere, many devotional pomps and ceremonies and special customs alluring to the nomadic and philosophic traveler, which its secularization has banished necessarily. I did not care for its theology (I do not care for any theology, in fact,) save as it lent a curious and picturesque element to the ancient city. Pio Nono was the pope and temporal prince of what little remained of the once powerful states of the church. Rome was, like Benares, a theologic capital, and its history and traditions had an interest through its associations of the day which they have not now as I have learned by later visits.

Then Italy had a great charm for me, the charm which reaches us so many things in our early youth. Then the mediæval chronicles were fresh in my mind, among them the tragedy of the Cenci, replete with fame and horror. I had not been a week in the city before I visited the old palace of the family, in the Trastevere, in a dirty, dismal neighborhood bordering the Ghetto. I had expected to find a decayed, massive structure, dignified and pictorial in its decay, not such a worn, wretched, repulsive pile, full of vile odors and all uncleanliness. It was revolting to any idea of the romantic, too mean to seem tragical. The former palace was what we should call a tenement house of the lowest class, inhabited by thirty or forty families, who apparently depended on washing for a livelihood, but who had no thought of washing themselves. The swarm of small children were squalid, the women slattern, ugly, forbidding. The husbands and fathers were absent, earning their daily pittance, except a few old and decrepit men, who might have been superannuated brigands. The broad stairways and high arches, filthy and broken, served to remind one of the departed majesty of the edifice. I went up and down stairs resolutely, exciting the wonderment of the swarthy inmates, who evidently regarded me as one of the crazy foreigners that invade Rome every winter and spring. I pleased them by distributing small coins among them, but they could give me no information. They seemed never to have heard of the Cenci; I might as well have asked them about Numa Pompilius or Tarquinius Priscus. They believe, however, that the place is haunted—this is an old tradition—and talk of seeing ghosts, and hearing sobs, cries and moans after the manner of the superstitious. If there were any ghosts, the ruined palace would be eminently proper for them to stalk in. If I were a ghost, and did not mind dirt, I might select it myself.

All the while I was there I kept marveling in what room the lovely Beatrice Cenci had slept, and if her diabolic father could really have abused and tortured her, as has been recounted. What a hideous story it is! Shall I repeat it? It may be new in certain of its details to many readers. There are different versions, but they all agree in substance.

Count Francesco Cenci was one of the richest and most powerful lords of the Sixteenth century, his father having been minister of finance to Pope Pius IV. A greater monster, according to accounts, never lived. He was as infamous as Nero, Caligula, Commodus, or any of the vilest emperors of ancient Rome. He seems to have been as near as possible totally depraved. Muratori, the Italian historian, narrates in his Annals that he was twice married (what should such a wretch as he want of a wife?), Beatrice being, with eleven other children, the product of the first marriage. He hated these children with a fiendish hate, after he had taken a second wife, as if they had been his bitterest foes. He was accused of causing the murder of two of his sons at the hands of his hired bravos, and he treated everybody with wanton cruelty. Beatrice was so beautiful that she inspired him with an incestuous passion, and he persecuted her, day after day, until he finally accomplished his infernal purpose. Having sought the protection of her kinsmen and of Pope Clement VIII to no purpose, she was so aroused to frenzy by her wrongs as to conspire with her brothers and her stepmother to kill her father.

If ever human creature were justified in committing parricide, she was certainly. Such a villain as the count needed to be swept from the earth, he was a moral pestilence. There are several reports of the manner in which Francesco was removed. One is that Mgr. Guerra, who was in love with Beatrice (any man might have been excused for loving her, if a little of what has been told of her be true), joined with Beatrice and her brothers, Bernardo and Giacomo, to rid themselves of this human fiend. They engaged two desperadoes to waylay him and kill him while he was on his way to Petrella, a grim castle in the Sabine hills, near the Neapolitan frontier. Their attempt was frustrated, whereupon Beatrice and her stepmother, goaded to desperation, drugged the count's wine in the palace, and introduced into his room, while he was in a stupor, two assassins, who dispatched him, Sept. 9, 1598, by driving a nail into his eye, penetrating his brain.

Some writers contend that Beatrice was guiltless of her father's death, and that nothing could be proved against her at the trial; that his slayers were two of his own hirelings whom he had injured so foully that they thus took revenge. One of the men confessed, implicating the Cencis. They were put to dreadful torture, and Giacomo and his stepmother confessed, as any one might do, to escape the exquisite pain. But Beatrice, though a delicate girl of only sixteen, with heroic fortitude refused to implicate herself, and won thereby the enthusiastic admiration of the sternest, most pitiless men.

As the Cencis were connected with the most illustrious families of Rome a great effort was made to save them. The renowned advocate Farinacci defended them ably and eloquently, urging in their behalf, even if culpable, the dreadful vices and crimes of the count, which were well known in the highest circles of society, particularly to the ecclesiastics. But nothing availed. The pope, who was autocrat then, and continued to be until quite recently in his own dominions, might have shown clemency, had not the Princess of Santa Croce at that juncture been murdered by her son. The highest nobility were in the habit of committing the most atrocious crimes in those days with perfect impunity. Pillage, ravishment, poisoning, hired assassination, every sort of iniquity, were cultivated along with literature and the arts. Rome was the center of every conceivable form of wickedness at which justice ordinarily winked unless moved by reasons of policy.

The Santa Croce murder alarmed Clement VIII, who thought that an example must be made, in the hope of discouraging private assassination, then so common in Rome. He determined, therefore, that the Cenci should suffer, and his will was omnipotent. He is said by some authorities to have been influenced to destroy them by his desire to confiscate the rich estates of Count Francesco to the holy see, something to which the popes in that and in later centuries were addicted. The famous Villa Borghese, which all tourists remember, for it is one of the stock sights of the Eternal City, was part of the Cenci property, all of which was given to the Borghese and Aldobrandini families, kinsmen of Pope Clement and his successor, Paul V. Every kind of corruption and villainy, from wholesale slaughter and the sacking of towns to forging wills and the practice of simony, was so much the custom that crime caused no horror. But severe punishment, especially executions, awakened the most animated interest, stirring Rome to its depths.

When it was known that Giacomo Cenci (the younger brother, Bernardo, had been acquitted for want of evidence), Beatrice and their stepmother—her maiden name was Lucrezia Petroni—were to be beheaded, the whole city was excited and eager to witness the closing scene. The Romans have for ages been devoted to every species of show or spectacle, and retain this form of devotion to the present. The scaffold was erected near the Castle of Sant' Angelo, a memorable pile, long used as a state prison, and built around the tomb of the Emperor Hadrian.

Beatrice, who has been confined in the castle nearly a year, is naturally the object of all eyes. She is very pale and worn, having been meagerly fed in her dark, damp dungeon, and showing traces of intense mental and physical suffering. Those graceful limbs have been twisted until the bones cracked and were nearly dislocated. From those hazel eyes tears of agony have been wrung, while the strong will kept back the words for which the torturers anxiously waited. Those golden tresses have been almost torn out. She has been racked again and again, and yet her great soul conquered her soft nature and kept it firm as rock. Despite all she has endured her step is firm as she moves toward the scaffold; a faint smile of resignation plays about her sweet lips; a strange light, as of another and a better world, rests upon and illuminates her lovely face. She looks to the vast Catholic crowd like an angel descended from heaven, ready to atone with touching patience for the sins of mankind.

A feeling of deep awe for the beautiful girl creeps through thousands of hearts in that pitying, superstitious throng, and they need only a commanding voice to snatch her from her doom. But the voice comes not, and she soon ascends the platform, unaided, and awaits the headsman without a tremor. Clad in white robes, with her confessor at her side, she embraces her brother and mother-in-law, kisses the crucifix presented to her, puts back her abundant hair, with a serene smile lays her beautiful head upon the block, and in another moment it is severed, with a heavy thud and a gush of blood, from the symmetrical trunk. The vast concourse starts with a half suppressed groan and a thrill of horror, and the brief, clouded, tragic life of the ill starred Beatrice is ended. She continues to live, however, on canvas and in marble, in song and story, and will yet live through coming centuries embalmed in the pathos of her unnumbered woes. Tens of thousands of wayfarers will in the future visit, as I have done, the scenes of her misfortunes and her distressing exit, to repeat, as their sole comment, "Poor, poor Beatrice!"

Her remains were buried in the vault of the Church of San Pietro, in Montorio, and there they still repose. She may have been somewhat idealized by time and through her sorrows, but there is no rational doubt that she was a brave and beautiful maiden, and tried as few have been in the furnace of undeserved affliction. The celebrated painting in the Barberini palace, attributed to Guido Reni and familiar to all persons interested in art through countless copies and engravings, is not, as has been generally supposed, a portrait of Beatrice. I used to think so, in common with everybody else, but I am glad to know otherwise. I never could understand how the original could have so insipid, so characterless a face. It is far better to leave the form and features of the charming, ill fated girl to the imagination, which is more gifted than any artist can be, since it presents to each mind its own ideal.

A QUARTER OF A CENTURY AGO

There settled in Baker county, Oregon, near what is now Baker City, a man who has since become identified with the resources and development of that country. This man is no other than Mr. John Stewart, one of the wealthiest and most influential citizens in the county. In a recent letter he says: "I had been suffering from pains in my back and general kidney complaint for some time, and had used many remedies without any but temporary relief. The pains in my back had become so severe that I was prevented from attending to my work and could not move about without the use of a cane. Hearing, through a friend, of the wonderful cures effected by Oregon Kidney Tea I was induced to try a box, and from that very first dose I found instant relief, and before using half the contents of the box the pains in my back entirely disappeared. I have every faith in the virtues of the Oregon Kidney Tea and can conscientiously recommend it to my friends. I would not be without it for anything."

Oregon Kidney Tea cures backache, incontinence of urine, brick dust sediment, burning or painful sensation while urinating, and all affections of the kidney or urinary organs of either sex.

Turner was a man s of age and formerly a cit In that country his Turner, was the owner of largest nursery establish- England. Some years ago he country from Australia and yment as book keeper in establishment of S D There he was employed up to his strong thirst for drink mastered him and he spent a savings at the druggists saloons. Since the time of his position he was in an almost state of drunkenness and was most frequent visitors to the police court. A few days ago Justice Kinsley gave him a fine of $30 and costs and an officer notified all the drug stores of the city to refuse to sell him more liquor. Turner desperate for drink then resorted to the Colorado City saloons and during the latter part of last week he stood by the counters begging every customer who entered to treat him to more.

Sunday night Turner's last spree had made of him a decidedly miserable specimen of humanity. He had spent the entire day in drinking. His ear was cut by his falling against the doorway of a saloon and the blood had trickled down upon his face and clothing. Late at night he was put on board an electric car. When arriving in this city he staggered up the west side of Tejon street and probably made directly for the park.

Turner had been warned previously by his physician that he must put an end to his desperate drinking or die. After this he told his friends at the florists that he meant to become a sober man, but apparently his passion was too much for him to overcome and he entered his last spree in a more desperate condition than ever before.

The funeral will take place from Fairley Bros' undertaking rooms at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Hold Ups Again

Last Sunday night another hold up attempted to victimize an other belated citizen upon our city streets.

John McKarell, employed as gardener at the residence of Mr Hagerman on Cascade avenue, was returning to the house at about 10.30 o'clock. When he had arrived at the corner of Cascade and Willamette avenues he was suddenly confronted by a man slightly below the medium height with a black moustache, a handkerchief around his face and a revolver in his hand which he held close to Mr McKarell's face. McKarell swung up his hand, grasped the weapon, and succeeded in wresting it from the man's hold. He then proceeded to march the would be hold up to a house a short distance away where he had an acquaintance. Arriving at the house he found his friend absent, and the prisoner pleaded so persistently for liberty that his captor decided to allow him to make his escape.

This is probably the man who has been terrorizing the city's citizens for the last few weeks, as his description tallies with those of the perpetrators of the other robberies of this character, of late.

Why I am a Methodist.

The Rev H E Warner preached last Sunday's denominational sermon in the First Baptist church

The sermon was preached from the texts in Luke xix, 10, and in St. John xvii, 18, the first being "The Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which was lost," and the latter "As thou hast sent me into the world even so have I sent them into the world."

Among the reasons he cited for his adhering to the Methodist denomination the speaker stated that Methodism is instinct with the broad principles of salvation, it does not hold a restricted mode of baptism, it leaves that matter so unsettled in scripture to the conscience and judgment, it does not draw a foreordained circle of the elect. Methodism, he stated, upholds an exalted type of Christian piety. It aims never to let its membership rest in idleness and lapse back into a Godless life.

Sells' Circus.

Yesterday was the eventful day of the year known as "circus day," with Sells Bros.' big railway shows as the attraction. The party got in on Sunday and the members put in a pleasant time in visiting the points of interest. Early yesterday morning the streets of the city began to fill up with the citizens and visitors from the country and neighboring towns, all intent upon witnessing the street parade. The parade moved promptly at 10 o'clock and was witnessed by large crowds. The parade was about as in former years, being marked by an unusual number of open cages showing the wild beasts. There were a number of pretty floats representing nursery tales. An amusing feature was the means taken by the Forepaugh circus to advertise itself. A float advised the people to wait for Forepaugh, but the Sells people had another declaring that Adam Forepaugh is dead, while a clown in a wagon rode along, accompanied by all the small boys in town, singing a song properly worded for the occasion, but not complimentary to the show that will follow in August.

Two performances were given yesterday and were witnessed by large audiences, the one in the afternoon being the largest that has ever greeted the Sells in this city. The threatening storm kept many away in the evening no doubt, but there was a big house nevertheless. The show is still given in two rings and on a stage, and includes the hippodrome. The stage features were good and included the dancing of "Cyrene," the graceful Spanish woman. She is the very poetry of motion rivalling even Carmencita. Among the pleasing features of the ring performances were the riding of Miss Leo and Miss Belmont, and of Showles and Dutton, aerial feats by Zorella Bros. and Petit and McVey, and a balancing act by a troop of Arabs. One of them held up eight men. In the hippodrome, the Roman standing race, the four horse chariot race, and the driving of four horses leaping hurdles were excellent features. The Sells Bros. have lost none of their popularity by the performances yesterday.

The popular Col Chas. Seeley is still the press agent for the shows, and a most useful member of the company.

Among arrivals at The Antlers on Sunday were Maj Chas. Watrous, wife and maid of New York. Major Watrous is a very entertaining gentleman to meet as he has been a great traveler and is just returning from Nicaragua where he went with Hon. Warner Miller's party. It will be remembered that the party was shipwrecked about three hundred miles off the coast and endured several days of distress. Major Watrous states that the captain was entirely to blame for the accident. The major thinks the big canal very feasible and that it will be completed in time. He [illegible] the country and came up the coast to San Francisco, where he was taken ill and lay at The Palace hotel for some weeks. He is in Colorado for the benefit of his health and is already feeling much better. Colonel Watrous is connected with the [illegible] and represent the P. News' [illegible] on the trip.

A big crowd went from Manitou yesterday morning to see the procession and circus parade at Colorado Springs. Everybody and his uncle and his cousin and his aunt with the children were there. Manitou reminded one of Goldsmith's deserted village. Pike's Peak trail, Ute Pass, Bear Creek canon and all the trails and roadways gave up their quota of families in farm wagons and sulkys, rigs that gave forth the giggles and shrieks of antique girlhood, surreys that may have seen Pharaoh's host cross the Red sea, carriages that were made in Charleston, S. C., for the wealthy of the old New England states. It was a study in vehicles and human nature, from the young cattle king on his bronco, glorious in leather trappings and lasso, to the grizzled old bachelor in his nondescript buckboard.

Arthur West, the oldest established jeweler in El Paso county, has rented in Colorado Springs the north half of Morgan & Headley's store, next to the El Paso bank, on Tejon street. He takes possession September 15. Mr. West has been in his present location on Manitou avenue, opposite the post office, for six years past. He will continue it in charge of a competent person, and take charge personally of the Colorado Springs store. He has patented an embossed souvenir spoon, for which he furnished the design and dies to the Graham Manufacturing company of New York. Each spoon bears the Graham trademark of a lion, an anchor and an old English G. The designs upon it are the "balanced rock" on the bowl, the handle shows a loaded burro standing across a railroad track, and on his side a placard reading "I helped to build the Pike's Peak road," between the handle and the bowl on the shank, is the word "Manitou". Their work in etching and engraving, done on the premises, is admitted to be unexcelled. Many orders are being received from citizens as well as tourists, especially for their new embossed design, a cut of which appears in another part of The Gazette.

B C. Bosworth Dead

Mr. B C. Bosworth died in this city Sunday evening, aged 64 years. Mr. Bosworth came to this city as superintendent of motive power of the Midland road at the time Mr. Robinson became general manager. He had been a railroad man all of his life, and had held many positions of trust. He was quite well known to our citizens, and was universally liked and respected. He had been a sufferer for the past year with kidney trouble. Mr Bosworth leaves a wife and two children, Mrs. E. Barnett, wife of the proprietor of The Antlers, and a son who is connected with the Midland road. The funeral will occur at 4 o'clock this afternoon from Hallett & Baker's undertaking room.

The entertainment to be given by Gracie Hopkins at Weber hall on Thursday evening next in aid of the Free Kindergarten association promises to be of unusual interest. A TALE OF THE SEAS.

The Terrible Sufferings of a Bark's Crew.

FIRE, WRECK AND FAMINE

After Being Tormented with Fire the Ship is Wrecked by a Hurricane The Crew Remain 103 Days on a Small Island

SYDNEY, N. S. W., July 7.—The crew of a schooner which has arrived here from New Zealand tells a story of the terrible sufferings of the crew of the bark Comprede, bound from Calcutta for Chili. It appears from the sailors' accounts that the Comprede caught fire at sea and that her captain made for Bluffs Harbor, Province of Otago, New Zealand, on Foveaux straits.

Before the bark reached Bluff Harbor she was overtaken by a fearful hurricane, during which the sea swept over her and cleared her decks of everything which it was possible to wash away. The Comprede was then so totally storm-struck that she became waterlogged and began to sink.

In this helpless condition the Comprede drove upon a ridge of rocks off the Auckland islands.

Her crew managed to swim ashore and there they remained for 103 days suffering terrible privations and being reduced to a state bordering upon starvation. While hunting for food one of the unfortunate seamen was lost in the bush and supposed to have starved to death. The Comprede's company was rescued by the Enod, a sealing vessel, after 103 days. The latter conveyed the men to New Zealand.

A Disabled Steamer

NEW YORK, July 7.—The steamship Servia, which was disabled on Saturday night, arrived this evening, having been towed into port by the steamship Chester, assisted by several tugs. The accident happened on Saturday night, when the steamer was about 310 miles east of Sandy Hook, and consisted in the breaking of the crank-pin which disabled the engines. The sea was calm at the time, and but little uneasiness was felt among the passengers. Prince George of Greece will be transferred to the steamer City of New York to-morrow, on which he will sail for England.

A Very Bad Man

SAN FRANCISCO, July 7.—A tragedy resulting in the death of two men and the wounding of a policeman occurred this morning. A year ago Moreno Soto, a wood-chopper and one of the most desperate characters in the state, cut and fearfully wounded his wife and fled to parts unknown. The woman recovered a few months ago and opened a boarding house. Her lodgers were Mexicans and mostly wood-choppers. This morning Soto returned to the city and called at the house. His wife saw him in time to escape through the back door. Soto entered the rear of the house where he saw a Mexican in a room and fired a shot at him, but without effect. The Mexican escaped by a window. Soto then went to another room in the front of the house, apparently looking for his wife with the smoking pistol in his hand. A lodger named Nicolai Smith was in the room holding the door. Soto fired through the door, shooting Smith through the heart. The desperado then started down the street with a pistol in each hand. Officers Edwards and Monahan started after the murderer. When within half a block of him he opened fire on the officers. After many shots had been exchanged Soto ran into a small shanty, bolted the door and crawled under a bed. Officer Edwards had exhausted his ammunition by this time and was wounded in the arm. He secured a rifle from a house near by and shot through the door of the shanty and under the bed. Soto returned the fire for some time but finally shouted that he would surrender. He was dragged from under the bed and found to have been riddled with bullets. He died in a few minutes. The officer's injury is not severe.

The Libel Dismissed.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—The decision of Judge Ross' court yesterday dismissing the libel against the schooner Robert and Minnie, which vessel supplied the arms to the Itata, was a great surprise to officials in Washington. It was generally believed that the case against her was much stronger than that which could be made out against the Itata. Notwithstanding the reservation made by Judge Ross in his decision it is felt that his action will cause the failure of the original libel lodged against the Chilian vessel, although she may still be held on some technical charge connected with her stay while under legal detention. This outcome will be a severe disappointment to the state and naval departments, which, after an expenditure, direct and indirect, on the chase of the Itata that is estimated to run up closely in the neighborhood of $100,000.

A telegram was received at the department of justice to-day from United States marshal Gard at San Diego, Cal., asking instructions as to his course in regard to the seized Chilian steamer Itata. In response the acting attorney general telegraphed United States attorney Cole at San Diego to libel the vessel at once and turn her over to the United States marshal by due process of law. By special arrangement with the naval department the vessel will be transferred to the custody of the civil authorities to-day.

Martial Law Needed.

SEATTLE, Wash., July 7.—Brigadier-general Curry and Sheriff Woolley returned at [illegible] back this morning from the mining camps Black Diamond, Franklin and Newcastle, where they have requested all armed bodies to surrender arms without forcing the governor to declare martial law and disband [illegible] forces. The committee appointed at a meeting held, agreed to give up the arms, but individuals will doubtless refuse to abide by the committees' decision.

The worst aspect is at Gilman, where although there are no negroes, there is a [illegible] element amongst the strikers. The mine at Gilman is fortified thoroughly [illegible] the act of the strikers is still awaited with interest.

[illegible] the camps many are dominated by a [illegible] few who hold the others in subjection by intimidation. From appearances at a late hour last night it is thought that the governor will be forced to declare martial law in the districts where trouble exists.

The Desert Lake.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 6.—Nothing of an authentic nature was received from Salton Lake yesterday. Reports were received that the water has risen two inches, but the Salt works are still running and the afternoon statement shows only twenty-three inches in the deepest part. The men sent out from [illegible] have not yet been heard from and [illegible] uneasiness is felt. If they do not appear to-morrow another party will start out at once.

THE SOURCE OF THE FLOW.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 7.—Dispatches received by the railroad officers to-day from Salton show that there is no material change in the level of the lake. The exploring party sent out five days ago from Yuma have returned, but their report is [illegible]. They went down the Colorado and found where the water was entering the [illegible] at El Rio and traced it for fifty-two miles as far as Great Lake at the Indian Wells. They found the stream leaving the Colorado to be from five to forty feet deep. [illegible] covered all the old stage route [illegible] from the Colorado it [illegible] of four [illegible] an hour. The [illegible] a half to two miles wide and from two to four feet deep. The party came within sight of the ridge which separates the Indian Wells from Salton basin, but they did not explore this ridge to ascertain just how the water comes through. Another party will be sent out by the railroad to-morrow, starting from Flowing Wells with instructions not to return until they have settled this desert mystery. The Colorado river is falling steadily, having dropped a foot in five days.

The Missouri Rising

KANSAS CITY, July 7.—Dispatches from various parts of the eastern half of Kansas and all of northwestern Missouri state that heavy rains have prevailed to-day, greatly damaging wheat in shock. The heavy fall of rain has caused the Missouri river to rise again to the flood stage. The water in the river now stands seven feet above the high water mark, having risen [illegible] during the past twenty-four hours. The river had just receded far enough to allow the people who had been driven from their homes in the bottoms to resume their residence there. If the water rises a foot higher they will again be compelled to abandon their homes.

MILWAUKEE, July 7.—Minneapolis could not hit Smith to-day. They narrowly escaped being shut out, their only run, made in the ninth inning, being the result of an error. Score: Milwaukee, 6; Minneapolis, 1.

DULUTH-SIOUX CITY

DULUTH, Minn., July 7.—Inability to hit Inks and the opposing case of Dewald, who was unmercifully pounded by the home team, who obtained twelve hits with a total of twenty-nine bases, was the prime cause of the downfall of the corn husking aggregation here to-day. A rocky decision by Emslie in the fifth inning gave the visitors three runs and costly errors by the home team allowed three others to be made. Score: Duluth, 11; Sioux City, 6.

The Situation in Hayti

NEW YORK, July 7.—The World's special from Port au Prince, Hayti, says: "I have to-day had an interview with Hippolyte's minister of state, M. A. Firmin. He declares that the Haytian government will never allow a foreign government to be established at Mole St. Nicholas, and denies that he ever promised to cede or sell Mole St. Nicholas to the United States government.

He contends that the execution of Eugand was fully justified, as Eugand was a citizen of Hayti, and refuses to allow France any indemnity on that score. Affairs have become more tranquil. The Haytian government has a friendly feeling towards the United States government and resents the proposed interference by European powers in the internal troubles of Hayti.

National Editorial Association

ST. LOUIS, July 7.—A special to the Republic from Columbia, Mo., says the [illegible] for the next meeting of the National Editorial association has just been sent out from Columbia. The association will meet July 14 in St. Paul, Minn. Every state and territory will be represented, and the convention promises to be the largest assemblage of newspaper men ever held in America. Seven hundred delegates have already been appointed. The programme is thoroughly practical and of exceptional interest. During the session of the association the first public exhibition of the type setting machines will take place.

The Cherokee Strip in Court.

KINGFISHER, Okla., July 7.—United States district-judge A. J. Seay rendered a decision yesterday which if sustained will have an important bearing on the title to the Cherokee outlet. After the removal of the Cherokee Live Stock association from the Cherokee strip, the Cherokees had placed about 30,000 head of cattle on the land. By executive orders issued through the war department these were being removed by troops when proceedings were brought to enjoin their removal. The decision was rendered this afternoon adverse to the Cherokee title, and if sustained virtually extinguishes all the rights of the Cherokees to the land.

An Inhuman Crime.

CLEVELAND, O., July 7.—Max Copperman was taken into custody to-day and will be held to await the result of the coroner's inquest on the body of his wife, Ida Copperman, who died this morning. Copperman and the wife had quarrelled frequently. Yesterday he beat her and finally went away, telling a neighbor his wife was asleep. A minute or two later Mrs. Copperman ran screaming into the street with her clothing all on fire. The police suspect that Copperman set fire to his wife's dress as she lay asleep on a bed.

KANSAS CITY, July 7.—Dispatches from various points in the eastern half of Kansas and all of northwestern Missouri state that heavy rains have prevailed to-day. The fall of rain varied in amount from .5 inch here to 3 inches at McPherson. Considerable damage is reported to wheat in shock and it has been impossible to harvest on account of previous heavy rains.

The Kaiser's Visit [illegible]

The kaiser's visit has been [illegible] at Windsor [illegible] yesterday. The show [illegible] to-day sadly marred the races at Hurlingham and spoiled for the imperial visitor the beauty [illegible]. It was certainly quite an English outdoor show. The people are saying that the kaiser and [illegible]. The kaiser keeps [illegible] the Prince of Wales at every opportunity as if to refute the rumors that they were not on good terms. A funny contrast was presented to-day in front of Worcester [illegible] when two lofty guardsmen, almost giants in height and built in proportion, stood at a respectful distance while the slender kaiser and the rather short and stout prince subjected them to a critical examination for the benefit of the kaiser. A party of spectators could not suppress a laugh, whereupon the two royalties hastily retired into the castle.

There was a magnificent state banquet in honor of the kaiser and kaiserin in St. George's hall, Windsor, this evening. All the members of the English and German royal families in England were present, including the queen, the kaiser and kaiserin, Prince of Wales and the various princes, excepting, of course, the young children. The leading ambassadors were also present, including Count Hatzfeldt, the German, and the Russian ambassador, the Duke and Duchess of Portland, Lord Salisbury and Lord Kimberly. The guests sat at a table 150 feet long, whereon were displayed gold candelabras and the royal plate, valued at £1,800,000.

A singular accident is reported in connection with the naval exhibition. A balloon sent up from the exhibition fell during a storm on Bexley Heath. The balloon wrecked the cottage of a man named Lee, who was buried in the folds of the balloon and nearly suffocated by gas. Three persons who were in the balloon escaped unhurt.

In the house of commons this afternoon Lord George Hamilton said that no want of confidence had been expressed as to the utility of the six-inch breech-loading gun which recently exploded on board the British warship Cordelia during the target practice off the coast of Australia, by which two officers and four seamen were killed and many others injured. The gun had been in use for some years. It was one of the earliest designs of six-inch breech-loaders. During the target practice the gun had been fired six rounds. Then it was loaded with a full charge and a 34-pound common shell. When the seventh round was fired the gun burst.

An Eruption of Vesuvius.

NAPLES, July 7.—The eruption of Vesuvius is increasing. A strong earthquake shock was felt last evening at Frosolone, province of Campobasso.

A GREAT ERUPTION FEARED.

LONDON, July 7.—A dispatch from Rome says that the villagers in the slope of Mount Vesuvius are abandoning their homes and their vineyards, fearing that one of the greatest eruptions in the history of the mountain is impending. The earthquake shocks that have always preceded destructive outbursts of the volcano in the past have been felt in several parts of Italy, and of late in close proximity to the mountain. The authorities of Naples are keeping a close watch for signs of increasing danger and visitors have been warned not to approach too near to the crater and to avoid the path of the lava. Since the death of a Brazilian journalist a few days ago, by falling into the crater, several travellers have shown a morbid desire to gaze into the pit of molten lava in which the unfortunate man disappeared. In such cases, should another fatal accident occur, the guide, the prefect of police has stated, will be prosecuted. It is the opinion of Italian scientists that the earthquakes affecting the peninsula will increase in violence until Vesuvius breaks out in a serious eruption, and that then the earthquake visitations will for the present subside.

A Missionary Craft.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 7.—The steamer Australian, which arrived from Honolulu this afternoon brought news of the arrival of the American missionary barkentine Morning Star at that place after a cruise of a year. Two calls were made at Ponape, Caroline islands. On the first visit Spanish soldiers and natives were engaged in warfare. In one battle the Spanish consisted of 1200 men against 300 natives, but were defeated in spite of the great odds with heavy loss. At the second visit of the Morning Star the natives were found at peace.

The Louisiana Tornado.

NEW ORLEANS, July 7.—A dispatch received here this morning reported damage by storm as follows: In Lafayette parish many houses were blown down and damage done to farms. Marbert Washington was killed under the ruins of his own house.

DESTRUCTIVE RAIN

LOBDELL'S, West Baton Rouge Parish, July 7.—The heaviest storm ever known here occurred last night in this vicinity. The wind demolished the largest brick sugar house on the Belmont plantation, also several cabins and other buildings.

TWO LIVES LOST

GLOSTER, Miss., July 7.—About 8 o'clock this morning a cyclone passed through the country three miles from here. It came from the southwest and was half a mile wide. Many houses were destroyed. A negro woman and her child were killed and several other persons wounded.

GREATER DAMAGE THAN SUPPOSED

BATON ROUGE, La., July 7.—The damage by yesterday's cyclone is even greater than at first supposed. In this city proper the loss is estimated at not less than $30,000. The board of control estimate the loss at the penitentiary at $40,000. The houses in the track of the storm are unroofed and in several instances completely demolished. The only citizens known to have been injured are Mrs. Colton and Mrs. Young. The former is fatally injured. While in her brick house in the suburbs of the city the storm struck the building and it collapsed. The walls fell in on her and almost completely buried the unfortunate woman. She was rescued by her neighbors but cannot recover.

It is understood the board of control will take some action looking to clemency for a number of convicts who yesterday showed themselves worthy of a better fate.

Investigating the Accident.

RAVENNA, O., July 7.—The coroner's jury investigating the recent Erie wreck was continued this morning. S. C. Arnold of Kent, testified that the freight train left Kent almost immediately after the passenger train had pulled out, and that when the freight was under way the express was not more than 200 feet ahead of it. The speed recorder on the freight locomotive showed that the train ran the first three miles at the rate of twenty miles an hour, the fourth twenty-eight miles, and the fifth and sixth at the rate of thirty miles an hour. When the collision occurred it was going twenty miles an hour. Barney Dyke, watchman at a crossing about three miles west of the wreck, swore that when the freight passed him the express was not more than a mile away. This testimony, it is said, shows that the freight had encroached at least three minutes on the time of the express, which was running late with a heavy train. The freight had orders to run thirty miles an hour, five miles faster than schedule time. The testimony also, to a large extent, exonerates Flagman Boynton, as it shows he had not sufficient time to flag the freight far enough back to stop it.

The story that a dozen passengers of the ill-fated train are missing is emphatically denied by Conductor Boynton.

A Secret Circular.

CHICAGO, July 7.—A circular of advice issued through accredited official channels of the Farmers' Alliance to all members of farmers' organizations in the United States urges them to combine and withhold this year's wheat crop from market until the farmers can get their own price, or at least a price considerably above the average. The circular which is prepared to be a secret document, is now ready for mailing, and it will be sent to the two million members of the Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union, the one million members of the colored National Farmers' Alliance, the one million members of the National Farmers' Alliance of the North, and 800,000 members of the Farmers' Mutual Benefit Association, the 600,000 members of the Patrons of Husbandry, the Patrons of Industry and the 150,000 members of the Farmers' League. The farmers' organizations now apparently feel in a position to make demands calculated to yield pecuniary profits to the agricultural classes, and they propose to begin with a gigantic combination in wheat.

Catholics in the United States.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—Superintendent Porter of the census bureau has in preparation and will soon issue a bulletin upon the membership of the Roman Catholic church in the United States, by state and counties. The bulletin will show that the membership now numbers [illegible],000 communicants over 15 years of age. This minimum limit of age to 15 years will be adhered to in the statistics of other churches which are in course of preparation.

A [illegible] Duel.

NEW ORLEANS, July 7.—Bouby, editor of L'Orleans, and A. S. Carruthers, editor of the Mascot, fought a duel just across the Louisiana line to-day. Rapiers were the weapons used. During the encounter Mr. Carruthers was cut below the eye, and although the principals decided to continue the fight the seconds and doctors agreed that honor was satisfied, and that the two adversaries had given sufficient proof of their courage and dignity. The duelists subsequently became reconciled.

A GREAT SUCCESS.

Scientifically Was the Sing Sing Execution

A TRIUMPH OF CIVILIZATION

An Apparatus to Kill a Man Every Two Minutes Four New York Murderers Killed With [illegible] Justice at Last

[illegible]

The execution of the four men is declared to be perfectly successful, and without any of the horrors attending the execution of Murderer Kemmler at Auburn prison. There are, however, statements from witnesses which do not confirm the assertion of the officials.

The first man to take his seat in the electrical chair was Slocum. He was put to death at 4:41 a.m. Next came Smiler, who died at 5:10. Wood was number three and Jugiro followed at 6:16.

The mistakes of the electrical experts which made the execution of Kemmler in part a failure were carefully avoided today. The causes of accidents and delay at Auburn were known to the warden at Sing Sing. They had been anticipated in the arrangements for the execution of the four men who were to be put to death during the week. The tested voltage of the dynamos had been marked to 1800 while the estimated voltage which was turned into Kemmler's body was only 800. The weakness of the current at the Kemmler execution was chargeable in part to the slipping of the belts on the dynamo, and especial precautions had been taken to avoid this today. The dynamo used was a Westinghouse, a counterpart of the machine at Auburn, but it was supplemented by a smaller dynamo, intended to augment the current. The arrangement of the apparatus for testing the strength of the current was clumsy at Auburn, so imperfect that through the neglect of one of the electricians the incandescent lights used to test the voltage were left burning and absorbed the greater part of the current when it was turned into the body of the condemned man. Here at Sing Sing the switch controlling the current was so arranged that at the motion that turned the current into the execution chair the current wire that ran to the executioner's door turned it away from the lights and other devices for measuring its strength.

At to-day's execution the executioner was in a small closet with an open top through which he could hear anything said by any of his assistants and the electricians who were in the execution chamber itself. Besides by an arrangement of the switches it was made possible for the electrician himself to turn the current into the execution chair or to turn it off in case the executioner should become confused or fail to respond to the warden's signals.

With this arrangement it was thought that every chance of failure had been provided against. The witnesses to the execution gathered at the prison in response to the warden's invitation an hour or more before the time fixed for the electrocution to take place. Warden Brown had declined to permit the representatives of the press associations to have access into the execution chamber either as witnesses or assistants and it was known several days ago that the accounts of it which might be published might only be obtained from the twelve witnesses who had been invited to be present, if they could be persuaded to talk about it.

At 7:45 p.m. the witnesses were still in the warden's house and waiting for breakfast. No one came out and no one was admitted to see them. Warden Brown's son drove down to the station during the morning and brought back a number of packages containing material to be used during the autopsy. It is expected that the autopsies will be concluded by 8:30 or 9 o'clock.

Dr. Alphonso D. Rockwell left the prison at a comparatively early hour, and it is understood took the train for New York. He said that the execution was an unqualified success, and that the death of the men was painless.

One of the witnesses briefly tells the story of the execution as follows, "About 4 o'clock the witnesses and jurors were let into the north chamber. The experts had previously examined everything and said they were satisfied that the machinery of death would work perfectly. At 4 o'clock Slocum walked into the death room accompanied by Father Creeden. He seemed to be making a tremendous effort to keep his composure. He had received Father Creeden's last office, and had declared himself ready to die. He was then firmly strapped into the chair, and the death current applied. Death was instantaneous. There was a sudden contraction of the nerves, then all was over.

Smiler followed next. The Rev. Mr. Edgerton cheered him up. Before Smiler had time to think he was strapped into the chair, and in an instant later the current of electricity was flashed through him that sent him into eternity.

Next to follow was the negro Wood. He had been worked up to a state of religious enthusiasm, and it was while in this frame of mind that he was fastened in the chair and killed by the fatal shock.

Jugiro was stubborn to the last. There was the usual ferocious ugly look on his face. He was closely guarded and short work made of him.

There was no apparent hitch in the four executions, and they were pronounced a success. The death of the four men appeared to the observers to be painless. Death came like a flash. It was one awful shock and then oblivion.

The doctors took charge of the bodies immediately after death, and began an autopsy to discover as far as possible how rapid had been the killing and the peculiar effect produced.

The witnesses were besieged by reporters as soon as they made their appearance from the prison. All of them refused to say anything however, except that the executions had passed off without any hitch and had been a success from a scientific standpoint. Warden Brown had laid a strict injunction of secrecy upon them all, and the oath had evidently made such an impression upon their minds that they were loth to talk. All looked thoroughly used up and exhausted. They had been through a terrible ordeal and the effects were plainly visible upon their faces.

E. A. Brown, purchasing agent of the state prison, said that there was no doubt that the electrocutions were absolutely painless. "The horse killed yesterday in the final test," he said, "was dead before it fell. Its eyeballs were as natural as in life, after death, and this was the condition of the men put to death this morning. Each walked calmly to death, and there was not a struggle or hitch at any of the proceedings. When the current was turned into a man's body he died so quickly that it was difficult to realize that death had occurred."

The witnesses of the executions signed an agreement at the request of [illegible] that they would not reveal what transpired within the execution chamber. The warden told them if they refused to sign they would not be admitted to the execution chamber. All the witnesses signed the agreement. It is said the agreement was drawn up in the office of the attorney general at Albany. It was supposed to [illegible]. The autopsies were performed at [illegible] o'clock and the corps of physicians left the [illegible] a short time after that for New York and Albany.

Dr. McDonald, who conducted the execution and autopsy, was asked for a statement. He refused to give any information, saying that the results would be given out in Albany [illegible]. When asked to deny the statement that the men did not die instantly he said, "I have nothing to say as to that. Death was immediate and the men suffered no pain. They made no resistance at all."

"Do you deny that they were burned?" was asked.

"I decline to be interviewed on that point."

Dr. Ward was asked, "Did the first shock kill the man?" and he said, "I do not care to answer. I think the execution successful."

Dr. McDonald was asked how many volts were used and declined to answer. The witnesses have gone and the prison has returned to its natural state.

Warden Brown says that all information will be given at the office of the superintendent of prisons in Albany.

The bodies of Jugiro, Wood and Slocum will be buried late to-night in potter's field, in quicklime. Smiler's body will be removed by his wife in the morning.

Killed by a Train.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 7.—J. H. Phillipson and his son were killed by an incoming passenger train while crossing the track of the Big Four at Newport, Ill., just across the river this afternoon. Mrs. Phillipson was standing on one side of the track and her husband and son were between the rails. Mr. Phillipson stepped to one side while the son walked off on the other to allow the train to pass. The father saw [illegible] to bring his son back and both were run down and crushed beyond all semblance to human beings before the eyes of the wife and mother.

Morris Park [illegible]

MORRIS PARK, July 7.—The fact that the Lorillards stakes for $17,800 to the winner was to be decided here to-day, would it was thought attract a large crowd, but the journey here is an exceedingly disagreeable one and only about five thousand persons saw Mr. Marcus Daly's colt Montana by Ban Fox Queen gallop away with the rich prize. The other stake was the Hopeful and after a rattling finish it was won by Merry Monarch at odds-on favorite. The other races were won by favorites strongly backed horses and the talent had much the best of the day's proceedings.

New York Stock Market.

NEW YORK, July 7.—The reason for the boom in Jersey Central was the action of the directors in increasing the quarterly dividend from 1¼ to 1¾ per cent., making the stock a 7 per cent one. This action of the directors was wholly unexpected and the "street" was treated to a genuine surprise. Chicago Gas was the weak feature and declined 1 per cent on the announcement that the common council of Chicago had granted a rival company privilege to lay mains for irrigating purposes. The decline was subsequently partly recovered. The remainder of the list changed but little. Prices as a rule, however, were steadily held, especially in the case of North American and Northern Pacific. At midday the majority of the list was slightly higher than last evening's closing figures. Louisville and Nashville was a feature of the afternoon dealings. Its price advanced on some covering by the shorts induced by the announcement of an increase of $80,000 in the gross receipts of the company for the fourth week in June. There was a revival in the talk about the company paying a cash dividend of 2½ per cent. The directors meet on Thursday. The general market was extremely dull throughout the afternoon, but prices were fairly well maintained until near the close, when moderate selling caused the market to weaken somewhat. New Jersey Central was strong throughout the day and at the highest point its price was up to 115¾. From that there was a reaction to 114⅞. The closing prices were irregularly and slightly changed. There was considerable activity in silver bullion certificates during the afternoon, with rumors that the bull combination which managed the short lived rally of last month was about to come into the market again. Luger, Smithers & Co. were heavy buyers of silver certificates. They bought 150,000 in the regular way and took 100,000 ounces more from outsiders who were not in the silver crowd on the floor of the exchange at the time, and the transactions were not recorded. Total sales 177,215 shares.

The new lake in southern California though now comparatively fresh will be salt enough by election time. And the Democracy will be in it.

The People's party announce that they will carry Kentucky. They do well to brag before election. It is a poor plan to count your chickens before they are hatched, but the man who has no other supply for his incubator than china door knobs cannot do better.

Such papers as the New York Press, which are inclined to exalt protection above reciprocity, doubtless imagine that they are doing good service for the Republican party, while in reality they are its worst enemies. There is not even a majority of Republicans who believe in the doctrines of ultra-protection advocated by The Press.

The arrangements for Australian federation do not seem to be working as smoothly as was hoped. Local jealousies and especially a difference of opinion in regard to tariff questions seem to be the trouble, very much as they were at the foundation of our own republic. It was the necessity for common action in the face of common danger which drove the American colonies into union, and a similar need will eventually result in a united Australian commonwealth.

It is not a very satisfactory thought that in a state like New York, one of those most advanced in civilization in the world, it should be thought necessary to put four men to death in a single morning. "The worst use to which a man can be put is to hang him," and electrocution however much of an improvement it may be over hanging is at best a barbarous word for a barbarous deed. Perhaps in a happier future there will be a way of reforming criminals or of preventing crime so that executions will be unnecessary, but at the present era, it would be much more unsatisfactory if these criminals were not executed. The secrecy enjoined by the new law and the mysterious terrors of the agent employed will not be without an effect upon the ignorant and foreign classes who compose so large a part of New York's criminal class. The new death may be quite painless, but the awful fate of the linemen who have been roasted in mid air is the image which is most likely to appear in their minds at the mention of electrocution.

THE UNITED STATES AND COLORADO.

The United States is not only one of the largest and richest countries in the world, but it is also one of the most independent commercially. We not only have a territory of immense extent, but of great varying character, in soil, in climate and in every condition which tends to vary our products both natural and manufactured, and to put us into a position not only to supply our wants, but to have a surplus for selling to our neighbors. It is pleasant to think that as the United States stands among the nations, so is Colorado among the states of the union. None excels in variety of resources and while we can not yet boast of superior wealth and production there can be no doubt that the future will place us in the front rank in these respects. It is a rather singular fact, and one very encouraging to those who desire the future welfare of the Centennial state, that mineral wealth, which we must count as our principal natural endowment is also that upon which our country seems chiefly to rely for its prominence among the nations of the world. The silver and gold which have made Colorado famous will be produced in increasing amounts as the treasure vaults of her mountains are better known, and the almost untouched stores of coal, iron and the baser metals will bring riches prosperity. Because we know our own resources in this line so well we may feel a double interest, both as Americans and Coloradans, in the following editorial from the Fourth of July number of the Philadelphia Press:

No other feature is likely to demonstrate the pre-eminence of the United States more completely than the aggregate of its mineral products. This is placed at $566,983,450 for 1890. No country in the world can compare with this. Great Britain comes the nearest to it, with mineral products of $367,500,000 in 1889. The London Economist recently grouped the aggregate mineral products of the British empire in all parts of the world, with 360,000,000 of population, and the total is but $498,000,000, or $68,000,000 less than the aggregate in this country.

By the side of these great totals other nations make but a beggarly showing. Germany in 1888 had but $123,500,000 of mineral products, or barely a fifth of our own. France produces only $85,000,000 from its mines and quarries, a seventh of our total. Russia produces still less, and no European nation approaches these.

Our mineral product last year, in short, was nearly as large as that of all Europe put together, which, at the outside, was not over $580,000,000. The mineral product of the British Empire, outside of Great Britain, is placed by the Economist at $120,000,000. The product of the rest of the world, outside of Europe, the British Empire and the United States, is at the largest $120,000,000 in value, and is probably less. In all, out of a mineral product for the globe of about $1,450,000,000 the United States produces a round third.

This is a good thing to think of on the Glorious Fourth. Remember, too, that this land, in which every man has a chance—and there are chances for all—grows seven-eighths of the cotton, a sixth of the wool, one-fourth of the wheat, and four-fifths of the corn grown in the world. It has half the railroads and half the telegraphs and one-seventh of the gold, besides producing one-third of the world's annual supply of gold and half its silver supply. Add to all this one-third of all that the hand of man raises from the bowels of the earth, and is it strange that this land which God has blessed and keeps, [illegible] of the earth, is to-day the happiest, wealthiest and most prosperous the sun shines on in all his round?

A Correction.

State of Colorado,
Office of Forest Commissioner,
Colorado Springs, July 7, 1891.

To the Editor of The Gazette.

Sir:—I regret to say that the 1890 biannual report issued from this office contains a paragraph reflecting somewhat upon the action or want of action of the county authorities of El Paso county, in connection with the forest fire on Cheyenne mountain in January, 1890. I have since [illegible] at its [illegible]. The board, through its chairman, took some measures looking to the suppression of the fire, and, as I have since been advised, authorized the payment by the county of one-half the expenses incurred by the city in that behalf.

Will you kindly publish this note. It may atone, in a measure, for the unintentional injustice of the former statement.

I am respectfully yours,
EDGAR T. ENSIGN.

A Rare Fern.

To the Editor of The Gazette:

While staying awhile in Colorado Springs last month, Mr. Rudy gave me an account of a little fern which excited my curiosity and he kindly accompanied me on a collecting trip. I afterwards found it while out alone. It resembles tufts of small grass, and grows in crevices of rocks, difficult of access. It was so odd that I never thought of it as an Asplenium, but Prof. L. M. Underwood, author of "Our Native Ferns," writes me "the fern is Asplenium septentrionale!! Brandegee picked it in southwest Colorado, and I do not know of its being found since." Prof. Daniel C. Eaton, of Yale university, however, writes me that he has "good specimens from the great canon of the Arkansas." The name may be rendered "Northern Spleenwort." Although not on a botanical trip I met with other even locally rare plants. Colorado has reported very little in the way of mollusks, but I found fine and abundant specimens of the depressed form of the pretty striped shell known as "helix cooperi," in Williams' canon. Some smaller species, which I found elsewhere, I unfortunately lost.

Life in New Mexico.

Springer Banner.

On Friday last Jim Williams, a cowboy, rode into Maxwell City and started to take the town in true cowboy style. He rode up to the store and tried to ride his horse inside but the doors being against him, he broke several windows and roundly abusing everybody in sight, rode up to the hotel. Here he dismounted and attempted to gain admittance but this was denied him by the landlady, upon which he began abusing her, using the vilest language he could think of, at the same time breaking all the glass within reach and kicking in a panel of the door. At this [illegible] the game his cowboyship in [illegible] manner, [illegible] the contents of a double barreled shot gun loaded with No. 6 shot, and at about the same time a bullet from a 44 revolver made its acquaintance with his right arm, and he stopped to rest awhile. Saturday he was brought to Springer and placed in the care of Deputy-sheriff Bunn. Dr. Frick being called it was found that over 100 shot were imbedded in Williams' shoulders, [illegible] face and arms, besides the pistol shot in the arm. It was at first thought that one shot which had entered the groin, might prove fatal, but at last accounts the man was considered out of danger. He had a preliminary hearing before Justice Keenan who bound him over to await the action of the grand jury in the sum of $100. Not being able to give the required bond, he languishes in jail. This experience will probably impress the young man very forcibly with the fact that the day of the cowboy and lawlessness is past in New Mexico, and that law and order will be maintained if the people have to fight to do it. It [illegible] be learned who was at the business end of the shot gun.

Undesirable Immigration.

Washington Star.

Western newspapers are urging that immigration has not by any means reached the desired limit, and they would be [illegible] to think that those who press the subject of restriction are not true friends of progress. Undoubtedly the great West [illegible] settlers, come from where they will. But the sort of immigrants that are objected to by the friends of restriction are just the sort of immigrants that expanding California and the newer states of the far west would not care to have forced on them. It is the [illegible] element, the [illegible] ignorant, [illegible] who do not assimilate and will not [illegible] limits that should be excluded, and not any honest, intelligent, upright and creditable population for grafting on to the [illegible] of this country. The unoccupied lands of the west would better remain unoccupied a few years longer than introduce into the body politic millions of Asiatic and [illegible] Europeans of a civilization so low or so different from that of the present nation as would materially change it for the worse.

What Ought to Be.

New York Sun.

We [illegible] by several papers of the far west that tourists from the eastern states are appearing in unusual number in the far west [illegible] this year. Even during the month of June flocks of these tourists have been seen in Colorado, where there are towering crags, and in the Yosemite valley, [illegible] are gigantic trees, and in other attractive regions, where they can sit under the shadow of the Rockies or inhale the airs of the Pacific. We are pleased to get the news. All Americans ought to know more than some of them have yet learned about their own country.

A Mere C[illegible].

Denver Sun.

Lord Wolseley entered the British army thirty-five years ago at the modest pay of $1 25 a day, and out of that he was compelled to pay for his mess and uniform. Possibly he earned his salary in those early days.

Wanted It Himself.

It was an evening school in Providence. There was a class of restless, dirty, newsboys and bootblacks on the front seat, trying to see how little they could study and how much they could annoy the teacher. Finally the teacher called up the class and put them through the catechism on United States history.

"Who discovered America?"

Nobody seemed to know, and the teacher, a long suffering student from the university, lost his patience. Shutting his book with a bang, he dismissed the class with these sarcastic remarks:

"Well, when one of you boys get to the point where he needs to have some one vote for him as governor or president, he will be ashamed to think he doesn't know who discovered America!"

One of the wickedest looking of the boys raised his grimy paw.

"Well, Tom, what is it?"

"I know who discovered America."

"Why didn't you tell, then?" asked the teacher sharply.

"Cos I didn't want to tell all I know," said Tom, while the class went off into a roar. The teacher called up the advanced class in spelling, and there was a smile on his face the rest of the evening.—Boston Herald.

How to Restore Faded Writing.

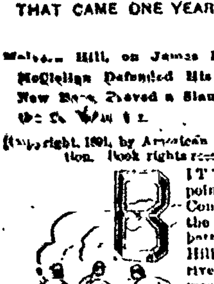
Often the writing upon letters and other documents becomes faded and almost illegible. If they are of importance the writing can be easily restored by first covering it with a solution of prussiate of potash, and then adding, over the prussiate, some diluted muriatic acid. By this means the faded letters will assume a permanent and beautiful dark blue color.

A PICTURESQUE FIGHT.

ALMOST ANOTHER GETTYSBURG THAT CAME ONE YEAR EARLIER.

Malvern Hill, on James River, Where McClellan Defended His March to a New Base, Proved a Slaughter Pen to the [illegible].

(Copyright, 1891, by American Press Association. Book rights reserved.)



BITTER disappointment for the Confederates over the result of the battle of Malvern Hill, on James river, July 1, 1862, was most natural under the circumstances. As things looked to them for a day or two before the collision on that field they held strong hopes of a decisive victory over McClellan's moving army so soon as it could be brought to bay, and when they learned, on the night of the 30th of June and morning of July 1, that it had come to a stand with its back to the river, and saw their own forces united, the prize seemed already within their grasp. When, however, the southern generals reached the scene after their hurried night march and learned what "Little Mac" had been about on Malvern Hill during the preceding twenty-four hours, while a portion of his troops had fully occupied their attention elsewhere, they shook their heads dubiously. They saw sights to appall them, and though their brave soldiers were equal to most desperate efforts, even to charging up long, exposed slopes where the Union artillery could comb the ground with canister, the first [illegible] was the correct one. McClellan couldn't be ousted from his position by direct attack, even if their tens of thousands should be sacrificed to the last man. The first description of Malvern Hill was carried to the Confederate commander, Robert E. Lee, by Gen. D. H. Hill, and in giving in his information the latter observed, "If Gen. McClellan is there in force we had better let him alone."

Gen. Longstreet was present, and said laughingly to Hill, "Don't get scared now that we have got him whipped."

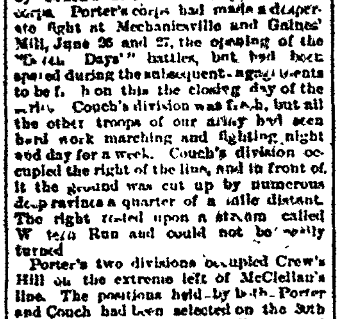
Lee apparently sympathized with Longstreet's view, for he ordered an attack, and Hill's division bore the brunt of it.

By singular good fortune I saw the whole Union armament on Malvern Hill as it appeared from the enemy's lines about an hour before the ball opened, and I remember distinctly two thoughts uppermost in my mind. One was that I would be happy to get inside of our lines on that hill as soon as possible, and the other that the Confederates would find the place a slaughter pen should they attempt the same feat.

Our division had been in the rear guard the previous day, June 30, defending the crossing at White Oak Swamp, and had held on until midnight. Between 2 a. m. and daylight on the 1st we had marched toward the James river on parallel routes with Lee's troops, and we climbed up the sloping grades on to Malvern Hill just ahead of the enemy, so that the preparations made to receive them were complete for our inspection. For a mile before we reached the front line on the slopes every exposed spot in the road, and, so far as we could see, in the adjoining fields, was covered by our cannon. The line was a semicircle, resting on James river on one side and on a swamp and creek on the other, and every commanding knoll was crowned with cannon, and could only be approached by the Confederates across open fields or bare slopes, where the range of our rifles and artillery would be unobstructed.

The most exposed positions were occupied by Morell's and Martindale's divisions of Fitz John Porter's Fifth corps and by Couch's division of Keyes' Fourth corps. Porter's corps had made a desperate fight at Mechanicsville and Gaines' Mill, June 26 and 27, the opening of the "Seven Days'" battles, but had been spared during the subsequent engagements to be fought on this the closing day of the series. Couch's division was fresh, but all the other troops of our army had seen hard work marching and fighting night and day for a week. Couch's division occupied the right of the line, and in front of it the ground was cut up by numerous deep ravines a quarter of a mile distant. The right rested upon a stream called Western Run and could not be easily turned.

Porter's two divisions occupied Crew's Hill on the extreme left of McClellan's line. The positions held by both Porter and Couch had been selected on the 30th by Porter, whom the commanding general had appointed to lead on this last day of battle as he had done on the fields of June 26 and 27, before Richmond. McClellan examined the positions shortly before the Confederates opened the attack, and approved of them, and as fast as the remaining troops—the corps of Sumner, Franklin and Heintzelman—reached the field they were placed in reserve. By 10 o'clock the hill had the appearance of a vast amphitheater lined from pit to crest with tiers of cannon, interspersed with battalion after battalion of men, whose bayonets glistened in the bright summer sun.



A WARM RECEPTION.

Lee gave the honor of leading the attack to the brigade of Gen. Lewis A. Armistead, whose soldier career was ended in Pickett's wild charge at Gettysburg a year later. Armistead's was to be the first of nine brigades of "Prince" Magruder's command that would assault Porter's division on the left at Crew's Hill. Simultaneously Gen. D. H. Hill's division of five brigades was to assault Couch's position on the direct front, while Whiting's division, of Stonewall Jackson's corps, would make a flank attack on Couch's right.

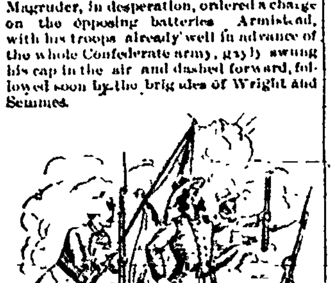
The whole movement was to be preceded by a vigorous cannonading by the Confederate batteries, and when this had shattered the Union lines, Armistead first, then Magruder's entire command on the right, Hill in the center and Whiting on the left, were to dash forward to the assault. But when the batteries attempted to do the work assigned them it was found that McClellan's line was not merely a fine military spectacle, but an army alert for the hottest work of war.

The first Confederate battery that attempted to play the first part on the programme was knocked to pieces in a few minutes. In order to reach near enough to our lines to do execution, the enemy's artillery had to advance along some of the narrow lanes or roads that threaded the slopes and ravines on Lee's front. These passes, as I before stated, were commanded by our cannon, and as soon as the head of a Confederate battery appeared it would be knocked to pieces. Two batteries that attempted to get into position in front of Armistead were quickly disabled, and a third lost 4 men and 3 horses before getting its guns in place, and in two hours' firing lost 11 men and 17 horses and had to retire. Armistead drove away our sharpshooters and pickets on his front, and vainly attempted to get up batteries to clear the road for a charge, as ordered.

Meanwhile Hill had similar experience with his artillery. The first battery that showed itself on his front was knocked to pieces in two minutes, and others coming up singly shared the same fate. About 5 o'clock, however, he heard shouting over on the line of Magruder, and presuming it to be a signal ordered an advance. The Alabama brigade, led for the first time by Col. (afterward general) John B. Gordon, pushed on to within 200 yards of our lines, and lost over 400 men out of 1,000 in one charge. The Third Alabama lost 200 out of 354. Six color bearers were shot down in this regiment, and the seventh carried off only a portion of the staff, the flag being literally shot to pieces. It was impossible for men to live in the face of the fire that greeted these men. Our soldiers delivered their shots with coolness and precision at short range, and after the front line exhausted its ammunition reserves were put in. Although the Army of the Potomac had fought and marched day and night for a week, the last half on short allowance of rations, there was no lack of ardor for this, the closing fight.

The orders to our infantry were to stand and await the enemy, but they could hardly be restrained from advancing when the Confederates fell back from each bloody repulse. In one such a rush from Palmer's Union brigade upon Garland's brigade of Hill, the colors of the Fourteenth North Carolina were captured by the Thirty sixth New York.

On the other flank at Crew's Hill the result was the same. After vain efforts for hours to get his batteries to work, Magruder, in desperation, ordered a charge on the opposing batteries. Armistead, with his troops already well in advance of the whole Confederate army, gayly swung his cap in the air and dashed forward, followed soon by the brigades of Wright and Semmes.



IT FLOATED ALL THE SAME.

Wright's brigade, 1,000 strong, its leader with his cap poised on his glittering blade, pressed on past the flank of Porter's men on Crew's Hill, and wheeling, reached the foot of the bluff under the batteries. Here they met the Fourteenth New York volunteers and were repulsed with heavy loss. With a remnant of only 300 Wright hung on under the muzzles of Porter's cannon until dark. Semmes' brigade advanced against the angle between Wright and Armistead and mingled his dead with those of our own line around the buildings of the Crew farm. Armistead's men charged six times upon the deadly batteries through storms of bullets, canister and grape. One of his regiments, the Thirty-eighth Virginia, lost its color sergeant and 2 corporals killed, and 3 corporals severely wounded, as each in turn seized the falling colors. Finally the lieutenant colonel seized the staff and was wounded, and a captain who next took them was soon hit by three balls. The colonel next seized the staff, but it was knocked from his hand and shattered, and the flag was caught by the remaining color corporal and carried through the fight, flying from a bayonet. So deadly was the fire at this point that the Confederates in their desperation made barricades of their fallen.

On this field, also, Confederate daring had its match. Here were the Forty-fourth New York, "Ellsworth's Avengers," and the Eighty-third Pennsylvania, two regiments that afterward scaled the steeps of Little Round Top at Gettysburg and held it gloriously to the triumph of our cause. The Eighty-third had lost 61 killed at Gaines' Mill, June 27, and now suffered a further loss of 50 dead. The Forty-fourth and Eighty-third charged together on the advancing enemy and captured a regimental flag. The Forty-fourth had four color bearers shot, and the fifth, though twice severely wounded, refused to give up the staff until he could do so to the colonel who had intrusted it to him. Another soldier of this regiment was absent during a part of the fight on special duty, and when the command was relieved after emptying its cartridge boxes, he refused to be relieved because he had a few shots left. In the ranks of the Sixty-ninth Irish regiment he fought on until his empty box entitled him to join his comrades in the rear.

The world reads volumes about the glorious achievements of the Army of the Potomac in after years, but the story of those battles of 1862 show that it was during those days that the bolt was forged that shattered the grand armament of the Confederacy in 1864-5. Malvern Hill was fought on our side by empty stomachs, many of the men having had no food for twenty-four to thirty six hours, and then only hard bread and water. Fortunately their wants were relieved next day when the supply transports ordered into James river by McClellan on June 18, in anticipation of his change of base, unloaded their stores into the laps of the heroic soldiers.

The Confederate loss at Malvern Hill was about 5,000 killed and wounded. This swelled their casualty list during the "Seven Days" to 19,000 against the Union loss of about 9,000.

Lee was fairly outwitted by his boyish opponent, for he should have known that McClellan was heading for James river and seized Malvern Hill ahead of him. As it turned out, Malvern Hill secured to the Army of the Potomac a new base, with gunboat co-operation and free water communication with the north.

How to Eat Grapes.

Grapes have a dual medicinal quality which is almost unknown in this country. As a matter of fact, nature has provided in the grape a sovereign remedy for all minor derangements of the stomach. In northern and central Italy, when the bowels become lax, the natives eat quantities of grapes, including the skin. When they need a slight purgative they eat a number of grapes, discarding the skins and only using the flesh. The tannic acid contained in the skins is sufficiently astringent to [illegible] incipient dysentery.

A QUARTER OF A CENTURY AGO

[illegible] settled in [illegible] county, Oregon, near what is now Baker City, a man who has since become identified with the county and leading wealth of that locality. This man is no other than Mr. John Stuart, one of the wealthiest and most influential citizens in the county. In a recent letter he says: "I had been suffering from pains in my back and general kidney complaint for some time, and had used many remedies without any but temporary relief. The pains in my back had become so severe that I was prevented from attending to my work and could not move about without the use of a cane. Hearing, through a friend, of the wonderful cures effected by Oregon Kidney Tea, I was induced to try a box, and from that very first dose I found instant relief, and before using half the contents of the box the pains in my back entirely disappeared. I have every faith in the virtues of the Oregon Kidney Tea, and can conscientiously recommend it to my friends. I would not be without it for anything."

Oregon Kidney Tea cures backache, incontinence of urine, brick dust sediment, [illegible] painful sensation while urinating, and all affections of the kidney or urinary organs of either sex.

CITY COUNCIL.

An Adjourned Meeting of the City Fathers Last Night.

A considerable amount of important business was executed by the city council last night in a comparatively short space of time, the meeting lasting but a little more than an hour.

All the members were present at the calling of the roll, and the principal work of the evening was at once proceeded with.

At the opening of the meeting the clerk read a petition from the El Paso boulevard association asking for free use of water for the sprinkling of their ...es boulevard running between this city and Manitou during the process of ...lling it. The association further stated their willingness to pay the costs in regard to tapping, etc., accompanying the sprinkling. It was moved and seconded that the sprinkling be done under the direction of the water committee and the petition granted. On motion of Alderman Roby it was also voted that the tapping be done at the city's expense.

The new Huerfano street viaduct was next taken into consideration, and the report of City engineer H. I. Reid, and engineer C. H. Middleton representing the Denver and Rio Grande road, was read and is as follows:

To the Honorable Mayor and City Council of Colorado Springs:

In accordance with the suggestion of your committee we have carefully considered the plans and the conditions necessary to secure the most serviceable form of viaduct at Huerfano street in Colorado Springs, and respectfully submit the following recommendations:

The grade on the approaches to be 5 feet ...

Width of roadway to be 30 feet in the clear, and in addition 2 sidewalks each ... feet clear width.

Two street railway tracks to be laid in the centre of the roadway. Tracks to be connected with flat tread.

Speed of street railway cars to be limited to four miles per hour.

Clearance at Sierra Madre street to be not less than fourteen feet.

General and detail plans to be prepared by the railroad company at its own expense and submitted to the city engineer for approval.

C. H. MIDDLETON,
H. I. REID.

Alderman Bartlett gave it as his opinion that the width of the viaduct roadway should be forty feet, and Alderman ...h made a motion that such be made. Alderman Rouse believed the viaduct should be built not only for this generation ... and consequently that the roadway should be forty feet in width.

Engineer Middleton then addressed the council on the subject, speaking in favor of a thirty foot roadway, and citing numerous examples in this country and Europe. He stated that the flat rails would make it possible for teams to cross diagonally across them. The cars running at the rate of four miles an hour would be considered as teams, and teams would also be allowed on the track. He stated that the extra cost by adding ten feet to the width of the railway would be from $5,000 to $10,000, and that the builders were not called on to look ahead a century, and have a ... one than needed; and that the ... for $10,000 extra cost for the extra ... would be for the sole benefit of the street car company.

Alderman Roby had come to the decision that if the Sixteenth street viaduct in Denver could get along with a ... of thirty feet in its roadway the ...ers of the Huerfano street viaduct ... do so.

Engineer Reid thought thirty feet wide enough. With this width the ... would be 5 per cent, and a 6 per cent grade would accompany the forty-foot width. His estimate of the extra ... made by the forty foot width and 6 per cent grade was $7000 or $8000.

The motion of Alderman Leach for a forty foot roadway was then put before the council and lost. In favor, 4; opposed, ...

A motion that the report of the engineers be adopted was substituted by ... that the acceptance of the report be ...d until next Monday night. This substitute motion was acceptable to the ...ers and was carried.

This closed the subject of the new viaduct for the evening.

Alderman Rouse brought up the report of a committee that the Rapid Transit company be allowed to proceed with the double track laying in West Colorado Springs. This work has been ...onable to some of the citizens of that place, and there has been some ... raised to it. The motion that the report be adopted was put to a vote and carried, Alderman Finegan being the only one voting against it.

Alderman Rouse stated that Mr. Finegan ... expressed a desire to fight the Rapid Transit company at every turn, and expressed himself against such actions, as ... the company deserved better ... Alderman Finegan replied warmly, but the prolongation of the discussion was checked by the ...

The city treasurer's report was read ... The cash on hand at the ... July was $[illegible],196.64.

The report of the city marshal was read. This stated the total number of arrests at 161 for the quarter ending ... These reports were accepted and placed on file.

A petition from the Charles H. Adams company, newly organized in the ..., asking to be admitted to the fire department was read, and referred to the city attorney.

The report of the hook and ladder company for June was received, and ... on file.

Alderman Eaton read a number of ordinances to be voted upon, the first being to leave off the license of real estate and insurance agents, but establishing a license of $30 per year for railroad and commercial paper brokers. This was left over until the next meeting. The second ordinance read for ... was one granting to the American District Telegraph company the right to erect poles and wires. Alderman Dunbar moved that it be done under the direction of the street committee, which was carried, and a unanimous vote was cast for the adoption of ...

The ordinance for the erection of fire limits was laid on the table. Following this came the auditing of accounts, which were as follows:

...well Manufacturing company	[illegible]
... Coal and Iron company	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]

The bills were allowed, and other business was proceeded with.

Alderman Eaton stated that Senator A. A. McGovney had threatened to bring suit against the city for damage done his Knob Hill addition by the cutting of a ditch through it, which had been done without permission, and moved that the water committee be instructed to confer with Senator McGovney and arrange for settlement. The motion was carried.

Alderman Leach asked that George Farrenden be appointed a special officer without pay, to serve at Cheyenne cañon, and the city clerk was instructed to cast a ballot making the appointment.

A motion that the street and ditch committee be authorized to complete their barn so that it can be used for their teams was carried, and the street commissioner was authorized to employ work by the day for its completion, and to charge the cost to the public grounds and buildings fund.

The council adjourned until next Monday evening at 8 o'clock.

Death of an Artist.

Mr. Geo. E. Corner died in this city at an early hour yesterday morning. The gentleman came to this city some three months ago, hoping to find relief from consumption. He was a very genial and companionable man, and during his short residence here made friends of all who met him. Mr. Corner was an artist of recognized merit in England and found a ready sale for his works. He was one of the founders of the Blackheath Art club, and one of its most active members. Two years or more ago Mr. Corner was elected assistant professor of landscape drawing at the Royal Military academy at Woolwich. Mr. Walter Paris, formerly of this city, was at that time holding the chief professorship in that department at that institution, and it was through his advice that Mr. Corner sought Colorado when his health failed, but he came too late. Mr. Paris, who is now in the city, and other friends, are very grateful for the many kindnesses shown the deceased by people in this city. The funeral will occur at 9:30 o'clock this afternoon from Fairley's undertaking rooms.

THE RESORTS.

Gossip from Manitou Springs and Woodland Park.

MANITOU SPRINGS.

The Mineral Water Bottling works are very busy filling orders.

The progressive euchre party at the Barker last night was enjoyed hugely.

Mrs. V. Foy, wife of Judge Vincent Foy of [illegible], is at the St. Elmo hotel.

J. Parker and family, who were among the first settlers of Chicago, are stopping at The Barker.

The friends of Mr. A. W. Bailey welcomed their host back to the Mansion and Manitou last night.

A. C. Yates, mail agent south out of Denver, with his cousin, Mr. Carpenter are stopping at The Norris house.

Mrs. Dunavant and two sons of Memphis, Tenn., and Chas. Lantry, one of the contractors who built the cog road to Pike's Peak, are at the Iron Springs hotel.

A. T. Winter, assistant ticket agent at Denver, and his family, and Mrs. A. Schoenman and three daughters, are guests of the Cliff and likely to stay all summer.

It appears to be a fact that at least one-half of all the necessaries of life used in Manitou and the Ute ... resorts are purchased in Colorado Springs. This is as it should be.

The usual Saturday night hop of The Mansions and Manitou hotels will be looked forward to with pleasure by the many friends of Mr. Bailey and gentlemanly assistants.

George D. Ford, president of the Union National bank of Kansas City, and his family, and Irvine Blair, editor of the Trinidad News, and family, are stopping at the Mineral Springs hotel.

It is remarked that the weather is not as it should be to warrant good business for the hotels. They have but a short season, practically ending on September 1st. Then, the families think they must get home to place their children at school when the term begins; the board of trade man goes back to help move new wheat; the merchant feels that he may lose some early fall business unless at his desk. For the rest, the usual cold rains from August 20th to September, keep them in doors and uneasy; so that at just the time when clear, sunshiny, cool weather may be counted upon all day and every day up to December and sometimes to January, they pack their trunks on the first fair day and move to "pastures new." Those who have made it their business to study and record the climate of this part of Colorado admit, and it is published statistically and officially that no section of country in the world has so many sun-warmed cool days between September 1 and February. It is to be hoped that these early rains now occurring may take the place of that week in late August usually wet and disagreeable. The weather record of our fall seasons for years past will show an almost unbroken succession of days such as satisfy man and beast alike.

WOODLAND PARK.

Mr. S. T. Wicks and family, from the Springs, will spend a few weeks at this place this month.

T. A. Thompson, representing Lawrence, the Denver photographer, was here a few days ago for the purpose of securing some views of Pike's Peak from this point. Our view of the peak is the best on the Midland.

Two of Woodland Park's rising young men went to Denver a few days ago and returned with companions to share their future joys and sorrows. The contracting parties were Mr. William Mulnix and Miss Eva A. Brown, and Mr. James W. Barr and Miss Effie Owen.

The excursion trains to Woodland Park on the Fourth brought a large number of picnicers who spent the day very pleasantly in rambling through the woods and in dancing at the pavilion. Besides those here from the Springs, there were quite a number from Florissant and Summit Park.

S. M. Sault, of Denver, is spending a short time at the Park. His family will join him in a few days. Hon. Fred Betts and wife, of Pueblo, are also among the late arrivals. They will be here for a couple of months. Other parties are expected in a few days from Pueblo, and the Crest hotel will soon be filled.

Strangers on their first visit to Woodland Park are delighted with the fine scenery and especially with the freshness and purity of the atmosphere, and it is believed that when it becomes a little better known to the outside world, and when pleasure seekers understand that they can secure first-class accommodations here, it will be a successful rival of the older resorts along the Pass.

"Thou Diest on Point of Fox."

Fox blades were celebrated all through the Sixteenth and Seventeenth centuries for their excellent temper, and mention of them is frequent in English drama. This is their history: There was a certain Julian del Rei, believed to be a Morisco, who set up a forge at Toledo in the early part of the Sixteenth century and became famous for the excellence of his sword blades, which were regarded as the best of Toledo. That city had for many ages previous been renowned for sword making, it being supposed that the Moors introduced the art, as they did so many good things, from the east. Julian del Rei's mark was a little dog, which came to be taken for a fox, and so the "fox blade," or simply "fox" for any good sword. See "Henry V," act iv., scene 4, "Thou diest on point of fox." The brand came to be imitated in other places, and there are Solingen blades of comparatively modern manufacture which still bear the little dog of Julian del Rei.—Notes and Queries.

Sick Room Vagaries.

"It is curious to notice the moral effect of illness upon people," said a prominent physician the other day. "For instance among my patients are a preacher who swears when he is sick and a gambler who prays. A successful and well known business man will not go to his bed when illness attacks him because of a morbid fear that he will never rise from it again. A lady of not the prettiest character has all her jewelry and fine dresses laid on the foot of her bed, I suppose to keep her mind from terrifying thoughts. A hundred other peculiarities are developed, but the most remarkable one to me is that of a professional man who reads up in current literature when he is really seriously ill because he hasn't time to do it when he's well."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

How It Feels to Drop 3,000 Feet.

One of the parachute jumpers compares the sensation to that of being upset in a river. They shoot down 200 feet before they realize they are loose from the balloon. Thereafter the remainder of the descent is easy. It does not jar until the ground is struck. In fact there is less jarring to the system than if one jumped off a six foot fence.

How to Disguise the Taste of Medicine.

A strong solution of extract of licorice destroys the disagreeable taste of aloes. Peppermint water disguises the nauseous taste of Epsom salts. Milk is a good abater of the bitter taste of Peruvian bark, and cloves that of senna. Castor oil cannot be tasted if beaten and thoroughly mixed with the white of an egg. Another method of covering the nauseous taste of castor or cod liver oil is to put a tablespoonful of strained orange juice in a wine glass, pour the oil into the center of the juice, then squeeze a few drops of lemon juice upon the oil and rub some of the juice on the edge of the glass.

SOLDIERING IN HAYTI.

HUNGRY PRIVATES SUPPORT THEMSELVES BY BEGGING.

Queer Way the Haytian Authorities Have of Taking Care of Their Convicts and Warriors—They Travel in Pairs and Beg in the Streets Day by Day.

Philip McDowell is an old and well known New Yorker. He was a volunteer fireman once, and all old New Yorkers know what that means. Of late years Mr. McDowell has traveled extensively abroad. He visited Hayti. A day or two ago a reporter asked him what was the most striking thing he saw in the black republic.

"I saw many strange things in Hayti, but the strangest of all was the way the soldiers and prisoners are transformed into beggars and are forced to live on charity. When a prisoner is sentenced to do time there he doesn't have a uniform, he learns no trade and he doesn't get anything to eat from the government. He is allowed to beg, though, for money and grub, and if he won't beg—well, he can starve.

"This begging is a funny kind of business. Take the prison at Jacmel, for instance. Well, every morning they fire the prisoners out to pick up whatever they can get, and each fellow has a soldier along with him to see that he doesn't run away. The two beg together all day and whack up in the evening. Then the soldier brings back his prisoner to jail and goes up to the fort to show that he has his musket all right, and hasn't sold it for drinks or a square meal during the day."

SOLDIERS GET NO PAY.

"But don't the Haytian soldiers get pay?"

"No, they don't. Any money there is in the army goes to the generals, and of them there are enough to command the combined armies of Europe and America. Once in a long while the Haytian soldier gets a dollar, which is worth about seventy cents in our money, but he and the prisoners live by begging. They go in twos from house to house and from store to store. Sometimes they have a good day and make a dollar and sometimes they don't make fifty cents, but whatever it is they must live on it.

"The soldier himself is a scarecrow. He has never been drilled, has no uniform to speak of, and if he hadn't a musket to carry around with him you couldn't tell him from the prisoner he is taking care of. You recollect the old Long Toms we had in our army before the war? Well, that's the kind the Haytian soldiers carry. They are all old cap and ball concerns, as like as not to go off at the wrong end.

"Take a soldier, a sailor or a fireman with us, and they all have a pride in keeping all their tools neat and clean; but military pride isn't in the game that the Haytian soldier plays. When he gets home after a day's begging he pitches his old musket into a corner just as a laborer in the street cleaning department gets rid of his shovel. It may be rusty and honeycombed, but as long as he can show up with it at the fort and satisfy the government that it hasn't gone to the junk shop he's happy."

DEATH OF NO ACCOUNT.

"The soldiers and the prisoners must be pretty good chums?"

"Well, that's very much as you take it. It's a common sight to see the guard and the prisoner reeling home together if they've made out well.

"I suppose you'd imagine that prisoners would often get away with those kind of guardians, but they don't. Whenever the soldier takes it into his head that the prisoner is going to escape he just shoots him dead, and that's all there is to it. No coroner comes around and post mortems are unknown. Why, I was walking one day with a friend on one of the chief streets of Jacmel.

"Right in front of us was a drunken soldier and a drunken prisoner. 'Now,' said my friend, 'you watch that fellow and see if he doesn't take it into his head that his prisoner is going to escape, and if he does he will shoot him.' Sure enough, a minute or two after the drunken prisoner staggered into the middle of the street, and the equally drunken soldier up with his Long Tom and shoots him dead.

"Things are not quite as bad at Port-au-Prince as they are at Jacmel and the smaller towns on the island, but the difference is not worth talking of. Hayti collects plenty of money in duties, but it is all grabbed by a few men, while the mass of the people are left to get on as best they can, and are forced to support out of their pockets as objects of charity soldiers and convicts."—New York Recorder.

Saving a Sparrow.

An authentic incident in the career of General Robert E. Lee is told as an evidence of his sweetness of disposition and natural kindliness. One day he was inspecting the batteries over the lines below the city of Richmond, and the soldiers had gathered in a group to welcome him. This action drew upon them the fire of the Union guns.

The general faced about and advised the men to go under shelter. But he did not do this himself. Walking on, although in apparent danger, he picked up and replaced an unfledged sparrow which had fallen from its nest near by.

The act was instinctive, but perhaps indicates a really higher endowment than ability to conduct notable campaigns.—Youth's Companion.

A Great Walker.

Henrick Ibsen is a methodical walker. So fond is he of his daily walk that he takes it rain or shine, and the cotton umbrella which he always carries has become a part of his individuality. His favorite time for walking is an hour before twilight. He writes incessantly all day and adopts this method of resting his tired brain and body. His well knit, muscular frame attests his good health, and he can stand any amount of literary work. It is said of Ibsen that he writes one year and walks the next.—Washington Star.

New Rules of Politeness.

In certain private schools of Brooklyn new rules of politeness are enforced. It is no longer proper for the little pupils to say: "Yes, sir," "No, sir," "Yes, ma'am," and "No, ma'am," to their elders. Now the correct thing is: "Yes, Mr. Brown," "No, Miss Smith," and so on.

If the child happens to be addressed by a strange lady or gentleman the child is instructed to reply, "Yes, mister," or "Yes, lady."

At first this strikes the uninitiated as an unpleasant innovation, but it has obtained a strong hold on the children and they are rapidly making their parents converts to the new system.—New York Herald.

How the Chinese Preserve Grapes.

They cut a circular piece out of a ripe pumpkin or gourd, making an aperture large enough to admit the hand. The interior is cleaned out, the ripe grapes placed inside and the cover replaced and pressed in firmly. The pumpkins are then put in a cool place, and the grapes retain their freshness for a long time. Careful selection of the pumpkin is requisite, the common field pumpkin, however, being well adapted for the purpose.

"History Repeats Itself."
Two years ago trade in almost all lines was stagnated in this city, times were dull and money was scarce. That was a good time to buy real estate, as prices were stationary and in a few cases people were hard up and had to sell at a sacrifice. Everyone who invested at that time made a handsome profit. This time is another good time to invest in real estate, and we have one client who is hard up and offers two fine lots on Washington avenue, West Colorado Springs, at less than cost. Washington avenue will be one of the finest streets in the city, and these are the cheapest lots on it.
On Tejon street, only three blocks from the Spaulding House, we offer 100 by 190 feet, prospective business property, for $4000, on easy terms.
Good lots in Hillside Addition, near Sinton's dairy, at $275 each. Terms $25 cash and $10 per month.
Lots in South Colorado Springs at $125 to $250 each. Terms $10 cash and $5 per month. There is no better way to save money than to buy one of these lots.
